ENEMY OFFICIALLY ENDS WAR IN AFRICA; VON ARNIM IS AMONG 150,000 PRISONERS

150,000 AND VON ARNIM, TOO—Colonel General Jurg von Arnim, who succeeded Marshal Erwin Rommel as Axis commander-in-chief in Africa, has joined approximately 150,000 of his men in Allied captivity, headquarters in North Africa announced yesterday. The German general was captured by British troops.

Allies Capture 12 Generals, Vast Materials

By EDWARD KENNEDY.
ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, May 12.—(AP)—All organized Axis resistance in Tunisia ceased at 8:15 p. m. tonight after the capture of the German commander-in-chief, Colonel General Jurg von Arnim, 11 other generals, and 150,000 enemy troops.
A special communique declared that isolated pockets of resistance still were active, but the battle officially was considered ended.
Captured today with von Arnim, 54-year-old tank expert who succeeded Marshal Erwin Rommel, were Major General Graf von Sponeck, commander of the 19th light division, and Major General P. Roich, commander of the 10th Panzer division.
Von Arnim and most of his staff were taken by British armored units in a quick clean up of the Cap Bon peninsula.
"It is estimated that the total of prisoners captured since May 5 is about 150,000," said the special bulletin announcing Von Arnim's seizure.

War Material Taken.
"Vast quantities of guns and war material of all kinds have been captured including guns and aircraft in a serviceable condition."
Thus six months and four days after the American landing in North Africa the Battle of Tunisia had ended in a complete triumph—clearing the way for an Allied invasion of Europe.
A nine-mile-wide circle of Axis resistance was reported holding out in the Zaghouan mountains southwest of Cap Bon peninsula, but the enemy was in a hopeless spot there and was expected to surrender or be wiped out quickly.
Arnim and most of his staff were taken by British armored columns sweeping through Cap Bon peninsula.
The capture of 150,000 prisoners in the final eight days of the campaign brought to 400,000 the number of Axis soldiers taken since the fighting began in Africa nearly three years ago.
This represents 11 German and 26 Italian divisions, and does not include dead and wounded.
The whole North African campaign was estimated to have cost the Germans and Italians more than 600,000 men killed, wounded or captured since the first Axis thrust toward the Nile to the final debacle on Cap Bon.
The losses in the last stages probably will total more than 200,000—150,000 captured and at least 50,000 killed and wounded.

Previous Losses.
Previously enemy losses were reported at 426,000 in killed, wounded and captured. Of these, 284,000 were Italians, including some native troops; 106,000 Germans, and 36,000 unspecified.
Prisoners totaled nearly 250,000, thus making the total killed and wounded about 175,000.
In addition to Von Arnim, Von Sponeck and Roich, the French reported the capture today of two other German generals, one named Yelich, who had taken over command of the Italian superbia division and other Italian remnants, and the other named Pfeiffer, commanding a group bearing his own name.

The French captured 25,000 men in exacting an unconditional surrender of all German and Italian forces fighting between Zaghouan and Sousse.
This was particularly sweet revenge to the French who remembered Hitler's little dance of joy in the Campagna forest nearly three years ago when Marshal Pétain's regime signed an armistice.
Major General von Sponeck, the commander of the 90th light division, surrendered to Lieutenant General Sir Bernard Freyberg, New Zealand commander, on the British Eighth Army front north of Enfidaville today.
General Freyberg during the School Will Show How to Save Sugar

How to put up jellies, jams and preserves for the winter months ahead and still remain within your own modest sugar allotment will be one of the points covered in The Constitution cooking school to be held at the Roxy theater May 25, 26 and 27.
Conservation, in all its phases, will be a chief topic of the three sessions to be conducted by Miss Gladys Kimbrough, directress of the school, whose services have been obtained by The Constitution through arrangement with Ball Brothers Company, manufacturers of the famous Ball jars for canning fruits and vegetables.
Sessions of the school will be held Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of week after next. Doors of the Roxy theater will be open at 9:30 a. m. on these days, the school will start at 10 a. m. and will last for two hours.

Germans' Attitude Is, 'Why Be Surly?'

By ERNIE PYLE.
TUNISIAN FRONT—(By Wireless)—The thing that Americans in Africa had fought and worked six months to get came today. When it did come, it was an avalanche almost impossible to describe. The flood of prisoners choked the roads. There were acres of captured material.
"I'll try to tell you what the spirit of the day was like.
It was a holiday, everybody kept on working. Everybody felt suddenly free inside, as though personal worry had been lifted. It was like we used to feel as children on the farm, when parents surprised us by saying work was finished and we were going to the state fair for a day. And when you have looked, goggle-eyed, all day at more Germans than you ever expected to see in your life, you really feel like you have been to a fair.
Today you saw Germans walking alone along highways. You saw them riding, stacked up in our jeeps with one lone American driver. You saw them by hundreds, crammed in a subway in their own trucks, with their own drivers. And in the forward areas our fairgrounds of mile after mile contained more Germans than Americans. Germans were everywhere.
It made you a little light-headed to stand in the center of a crowd, the only American among scores of German soldiers, and not have to feel afraid of them. Their eighty-eight is stood abandoned in the fields dead Germans still lay on the grass. By the roadside scores of tanks and trucks still burned. Dumps flamed, and German command posts lay littered where they had tried to wreck as

Hope Has Tee-to-Tee With Dorothy Kirby

By AL SHARP.
Bob Hope, the genial gent who parlayed a sharp chin, sharp nose and sharp tongue into a million-dollar profile, takes his golf seriously, and, as a result, he doesn't look funny hitting a golf ball.
Chided for not putting his left foot in his right hip pocket and gouging out an eye while teeing off, Hope got confidential. He called the reporter aside and whispered:
"Heck, I gotta be serious about golf," he confided. "That's my racket. You don't think I make money out of the radio and movies, do you?"

Plays With Kirby, Suggs.
Hope was busy relaxing by playing a golf match with Dorothy Kirby and Louise Suggs, the nationally famous Atlanta players, and Lieutenant Colonel T. S. (Buck) Rawlings, of the Army Air Corps, who is traveling with the Hope troupe by plane.
The Hope-Kirby team broke even with the Suggs-Rawlings outfit to all intents and purposes. Dorothy, with a 79, beat the Hollywood star, who had a creditable 40-42-82. Colonel Rawlings, the Atlanta who used to play at Ansley all the time, was the man who suffered.
Hope, who drew a rather good gallery as news spread that he was resting on the golf course, hit the ball so well that he surprised his fans.
Misses Shot.
Only once did he miss a shot badly. The ball headed for the tall weeds near a creek and Hope lazily threw his club.
"Get my rod and reel, caddy."

New Ceilings Drive on Japan On Meats in Seen in Talks Effect Monday At Washington

By IRVING PERLMETER.
WASHINGTON, May 12.—(AP)—A new schedule of specific, dollar-and-cents prices on retail sales of beef, veal, lamb and mutton was promulgated today by the Office of Price Administration, but it is due to be supplanted in a couple of weeks by another schedule, 10 per cent lower.
The ceilings announced today will go into effect May 17, taking the place of the existing system under which ceilings are based on prices charged by stores in March, 1942. The third set of prices is tentatively set to go into effect about June 1, under a new subsidy program designed to bring down the cost of meat.
Officials explained that the price list announced today had been in preparation a long time before the subsidy program was initiated and they decided to let it go into effect, even if only for a couple of weeks, in order to familiarize the public and the trade with the new "dollars and cents" system.

County Quotas Of Waste Fats Will Be Fixed

Georgians are soon going to have a chance to see just what sections of this state are most responsible for the poor showing Georgia has made thus far in the drive for waste fats.
County quotas are being determined, and will be announced within the next few days.
A complete and accurate record of the amounts of fats turned in by each county will be kept, and the results announced periodically.
If every housewife turns in only one-half a tablespoonful of fats each day, Georgia would easily meet its quota of 108,500 pounds a month.
Many housewives, to meet this quota, are going to have to do an about-face in their attitude toward the importance of waste fats in America's war effort. Too many of them are now attempting to deceive themselves with the thought that because they are already knee-deep in defense activities, they have no time for the comparatively unimportant project of saving waste fats.
There is nothing unimportant about producing enough ammunition for America's fighting men. Every time a housewife throws away a pound of waste cooking fats, she is taking four 37 millimeter antiaircraft shells out of some soldier's gun.
Fats which have been used time and again for cooking purposes are still important to Uncle Sam.

4,032 of 4,039 Wounded Saved, Admiral Says Here

This war has been called a war of ships, because the Navy is right in the middle of almost every battle. But the percentage of men who die from wounds received in action aboard American warships is smaller in percentage than it was during the first World War, Rear Admiral Luther Sheldon Jr., assistant chief of the Navy's Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, said here yesterday.

In his speech before the Medical Association of Georgia at its 94th annual session, Admiral Sheldon went further in his report of the outstanding achievements of the medical profession in saving men to fight again.

Transport of Wounded. "Transport of the wounded by air has been adopted with a resultant saving in life that is almost unbelievable," he said. "Reports show that of 4,039 men received aboard a hospital ship after removal from the Solomon Islands by air, only seven died."

"This is a remarkable achievement when it is realized that only the most seriously wounded were evacuated in this way. Practically the same percentage holds true in the case of all our advance base hospitals. Thus it is seen that if a man survives to reach a field hospital, his chance of ultimate recovery is excellent."

Admiral Sheldon spoke in place of Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire, surgeon general of the Navy and personal physician to President Roosevelt, who was detained at the last minute by the arrival in Washington of Winston Churchill.

Postwar Health. In a message delivered by Admiral Sheldon, Admiral McIntire referred to the postwar health and medical program, pointing out that "during the active period of the war you can safely leave to the armed forces the job of caring for men in service."

"You can rest assured that everything will be done to return them to civil life in much better physical condition than when they joined the services," Admiral McIntire said in his message. "Our wounded are receiving prompt attention and the results are astoundingly good. So it is to the program of rehabilitation that we must give serious thought."

"In addition to that a sound program that will provide better medical and hospital care for every citizen in the nation must be thought out and presented by the medical profession to our government. It is my considered thought that to allow any other group to do this would be more than unfortunate."

Red Cross Praised. Admiral Sheldon paid high tribute to the Red Cross for its activity in supplying blood plasma, adding that the Navy is shifting over to the use of human serum albumin, because plasma is difficult to regenerate under battle conditions and is bulky for shipment.

"It was not until recently that the supreme value of blood plasma was fully recognized," Admiral Sheldon told the doctors.

"Now we have only to see the hundreds of thousands of young men of our armed forces alive and well today whose lives, before the days of plasma would have been despaired of, to realize the virtue of this life-saving fluid. The Army and Navy are using plasma in vast quantities, and I cannot refrain from paying tribute to the American Red Cross for making it possible for us to obtain this plasma from the blood drawn at its far-flung Blood Donor Centers."

Shift to Albumin. "But, plasma is bulky and space is valuable on board ship and in the field. Also, plasma is difficult to regenerate under battle conditions. Therefore, the Navy is shifting over to the use of human serum albumin as fast as the manufacturers are able to process it. We fully realize that albumin cannot take the place of plasma in all cases, but we have excellent reason to believe that in shock it is just as effective as plasma."

Admiral Sheldon told of the use of sulphur drugs and new methods of treating burns which the Navy has adopted in carrying out the theme of his talk outlining the quick and long strides made by the medical profession in battle treatment.

During yesterday's session, a University of Georgia School of Medicine professor declared that while caudal analgesia will produce complete relief from pain in a high percentage of obstetrical cases, it has been "ballyhooed beyond its possibilities."

Dr. Perry P. Volpito, professor of anesthesiology, said: "This technique has received too much publicity for its own good." One of the dangers to grow out of this is misunderstanding on the part of the lay individual who might be inclined to demand it in her own case.

One of the reasons for bringing the method forward too rapidly is due to wartime belief that this technique may help in the doctor shortage. It does not meet practical demands at all, for it is too highly individualized. Some patients are the type to receive it and many are not."

ors, last night was presented a cup for meritorious service during the program on which he was one of the main speakers.

Medical Assignments. Dr. Paullin, citing the many new assignments which have come to the medical profession in this emergency period, said that it has done "an excellent job."

The job of keeping enough doctors at home for treatment of the civilian population proved a tough one, Dr. Paullin pointed out, but with few exceptions, the change-over has been made without leaving communities unprotected.

Dr. Paullin also commended the Procurement and Assignment Service established for getting doctors, dentists and veterinarians for the services.

"It is the sincere hope and desire of American medicine that every community have necessary medical care on a practical common sense basis," Dr. Paullin said. "To accomplish this doctors of this country are willing to give wholeheartedly and unreservedly of their time, talent and efforts to win the war. We are willing to make any sacrifice and cheerfully meet the increased demands of civilian and industrial needs."

Other Speakers. Other speakers at the sessions being held in the Biltmore hotel included:

Decatur Hero To Be Honored At McPherson

Lieut. Christopher Will Get Posthumous Award of Silver Star.

A Decatur hero, Second Lieutenant Guyton M. Christopher, will be honored with the posthumous award of a Silver Star at the Retreat Parade at Fort McPherson at 4 p. m. today.

The Silver Star will be presented to his mother, Mrs. Paul J. Christopher, of 309 Melrose, Decatur, by the commanding officer of the Atlanta Army Air Base, Major F. D. Shoemaker.

Colonel Clifford C. Early, post commander, will review the station troops in the Retreat Parade, and the public is invited to attend this ceremony, which will turn out all units assigned here.

The Third Army Service Forces band, now assigned to Fort McPherson, will play.

War Department announcement of the award to Lieutenant Christopher stated it was for gallantry in action December 1, 1942, over the Casamata shipping lane, New Britain. He was the pilot of a Flying Fortress.

Troops will march onto the line at 4 p. m. Before they march in review the salute gun will be fired, the band will play the National Anthem, and civilian visitors will stand at attention with the soldiers while the post flag is lowered. With Colonel Early, Major Shoemaker and Mrs. Christopher in the reviewing stand will be Major William F. Catron, post executive officer. Units of the III Corps, training companies and other organizations assigned to this post will participate.

Seals will be provided for many of the visitors. There are ample parking spaces at the parade ground from which the ceremonies may be observed. Civilians will be admitted to the parade area through the main gate on Lee street, which is also a trolley stop.

Middle East Has Signs of Likely Action

CAIRO, May 12.—(P)—The Middle East took on the aspects of a theater of likely war action today with the arrival of the veteran Sixth South African Armored Division and announcement that British military and government leaders of the area are conferring here.

The tough Sixth Armored Division played a part in the conquest of Ethiopia and Italian East Africa; went into Egypt and helped start the chase of Rommel across the desert, then returned home, but is now back somewhere in the Middle East.

Military observers declined to discuss the total Allied strength in the Middle East, but indicated it was coincidental that the presence of the South African division was disclosed while war strategy leaders are conferring at Cairo.

The full dress conference of the Middle East council was convened Monday by R. G. Casey, British war cabinet representative in the Middle East.

Among those reported in conference here in addition to Casey are Vice Admiral Sir Ralph Leatham, commander in chief of the Levant; Field Marshal Lord Gort; General Sir Henry M. Wilson, commander of the Middle Eastern Forces; Lieutenant General Sir Henry R. Pownall, commander of the Ninth Army of the Middle East, and Sir Charles Wooley, governor of Cyprus.

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA, Thursday, May 13.—(P)—Five Japanese bases on New Guinea and New Britain and the Tanimbar islands have been raided on a light scale by Allied planes, today's noon communique announced.

In the ground fighting which has flared up the Mubo area, 12 miles south of Salamaua, New Guinea, the latest development reported was the ambushing of a small Japanese patrol.

Czechoslovakia's Benes Is White House Guest

WASHINGTON, May 12.—(P)—President Edward Benes, of Czechoslovakia's government in exile, came to Washington today for a formal visit which gained added significance from the presence here of British Prime Minister Winston Churchill.

The arrival of Benes, who is a White House guest, is only coincidental with the coming of Churchill. But it was said in diplomatic quarters that Benes probably will contribute to the Roosevelt-Churchill strategy conferences.

War in Africa Ends 'Officially' morning demanded the surrender of the Ninetieth Division, but Von Sponeck refused and said his troops would follow his orders to fight until the last cartridge.

Later in the day, however, he proffered his unconditional surrender and his former Elite troops were put behind barbed wire cages, where thousands of their comrades had preceded them.

(The Italian First Army's leader, General Giovanni Messe, apparently also is due for capture on this front. A Rome communique said earlier today that he had refused Freyberg's surrender demand and chose to fight on.)

United States troops already had captured 37,998 prisoners, mostly Germans, in the Bizerte area, which they and their supporting French elements conquered last week.

The British First Army took 25,000 or more in the breakthrough to Tunis and rounded up tens of thousands in the swift cleanup of Cap Bon peninsula, where they encountered Von Arnim and his staff members at an inland camp.

Von Arnim and thousands of his men had fled to Cap Bon apparently in the hope of escaping to Sicily, but a deadly Allied sea blockade prevented that attempt.

Once Proud Forces.

These once proud forces of Von Arnim's melted rapidly before the surging British First Army columns that swept up both sides of the peninsula. They gave up with hardly a struggle, leaving Von Arnim an inevitable prey for the British.

The British had reached Cap Bon lighthouse at 3 p. m. yesterday to complete a circuit of the peninsula, then today began cutting inland to flush the last Axis remnants. In one of these attacks away from the coast they suddenly came upon their richest prize of the day—Von Arnim and his men.

The hook-nosed leader with a closely shaved head had entered Tunisia as the head of the Fifth Panzer army immediately after the American landing last November. Of an old Prussian military family, Hitler had chosen him to take charge of the armored sections of the German army shortly after the Nazis assumed power.

Von Arnim succeeded Rommel as head of the Africa Corps in mid-March when it retreated into Tunisia from Libya, and when Rommel returned to Europe. Berlin had announced that Rommel had been relieved because of illness.

American Victory.

Von Arnim and the others were seized after the Americans already had grabbed a glittering collection of German generals on the Bizerte front. These included a ranking General Burdewitz, Major General Fritz Krause, Major General Willibald Borewicz and General Von Vaerst.

The surrender of all these men and their various groups was made contingent on an immediate stoppage of destruction of Axis equipment. In many cases front reports said this was not necessary since great quantities of intact armament and supplies were found.

This equipment was being turned over to the French for the coming assault on Europe. The giant Allied Air Force already had abandoned its Tunisian offensive almost entirely in order to swing its weight against ripper targets across the Mediterranean, and General Giraud, the French leader, told his homeland recently that the day was nearing when Europe could be attacked.

French troops shared greatly in the Tunisian conquest by their capture of the 25,000 troops near Zaghuan.

French Announcement.

A French communique announcing this first unconditional German surrender since 1918 said tonight that French troops had joined British First Army columns at Ste. Marie de Zid, 12 miles northwest of Bou Ficha, to surround the final small Axis pocket of resistance, and complete "the dismembering of the Axis forces."

This small force of enemy troops fighting in the mountains below Saint Marie de Zid also had to contend with the British Eighth Army which was pushing along the coast to meet the First Army.

German and Italian troops on Cap Bon peninsula gave up almost without opposition to the British First Army which yesterday had completed a circuit of the territory jutting out toward Sicily, and then began slicing inland to round up thousands of captives.

A dispatch from De Luce said

truckloads of these unescorted Germans drove their own trucks back westward in long dusty files toward Allied prison camps.

Aerial Activity.

The British moved so swiftly through demoralized Axis ranks that Allied airmen had to cease their bombing and strafing runs for fear of hitting their own men. Thereafter the only aerial blows dealt in Tunisia were at the small enemy mountain pocket near Zaghuan.

So complete was the Allied stranglehold on Cap Bon that German troops made no real attempt to hold it. They quit cold. The few that tried to escape to sea were killed by Allied plane and motor torpedo boat gun crews.

Even effective sabotage of Axis equipment on any large scale failed. Dispatches said huge quantities, including the powerful 88 mm. guns, tanks, small arms, and some serviceable aircraft, were captured.

The prisoners flushed out of Cap Bon's hills and wheat fields included officers who rode up voluntarily in their staff cars to surrender. Orderly columns of infantry, grenadiers, air force detachments supply troops, gunners and armored crewmen, marched back to the Allied rear. Many of these men wore battle decorations including the Iron Cross, were well supplied and in good health.

A United States staff officer said that a collapse of German transportation was the chief factor which sped the capitulation of Nazi troops in the Bizerte sector conquered by the Second U. S. Army Corps.

Supplies Fail.

"They just couldn't get what they had to the right spot at the time when it was needed most," he told Associated Press War Correspondent Harold V. Boyle. "In one supply dump we found 1,000,000 food rations yet some frontline German fighters had nothing to eat for two days when they surrendered."

French, native-born Italians and Arabs gaped in astonishment at the long lines of Axis prisoners marching and driving their own trucks to the Allied bulwarks.

Dispatches told how some of these prisoners played accordions and mandolins, but most of them were grimly and wearily silent.

American bombers and fighters of Major General James H. Doolittle's strategic air force pursued their attacks on Sicily and Pantelleria, 40 miles off Cap Bon, as Allied air activity dwindled over Tunisia.

Returning airmen said that an onslaught yesterday on Marsala in Sicily by 200 Fortresses, Marauders and Mitchells and 100 fighters had practically wiped out that port. Pantelleria was hit heavily for the sixth time in four days, and a Cairo announcement said that nearly 50 Liberators from the desert air force, accompanied by fighter planes which leaped off Malta to join them, inflicted heavy damage on Catania, Sicily.

"Hey! With Fats Rationed How Am I Going to Save Them for Gunpowder?"

A VERY SENSIBLE QUESTION, and one your government wants answered right now. Of course, you should not only save your cooking fats, you should use them—as long as you can get any good out of them. But when that is done—then every spoonful, every single drop is desperately wanted.

AND MAYBE YOU THINK that what you have left over isn't worth turning in. But just one single tablespoon of fat—waste fat, the kind you used to pour down the drain—will make five machine gun bullets for some American boy fighting the Japs. And it doesn't matter whether it's pan drippings, old shortening, skimmings from a soup or any other kind of used fat. It's loaded with dynamite to help America.

AND DON'T WORRY about what kind of can you use. Any kind will do—even a tomato can. Save a few when you've emptied them, and keep them on hand. They'll go to tin salvage anyway, when you take them to your butcher full of fat. And no matter how little you save each day, or how long it takes to fill your tin, rush it to your meat dealer when it's full. It won't make any bullets on the back of your stove.

"Well, it's getting worse," was the reply. "It's too hard to get the money when you win."

"From you or him?" "Either way. I've been threatening to sue him ever since I beat him about three months ago. It doesn't do any good."

About that time seven kids came racing across the golf course to get autographs. "Oh, me," Hope murmured. "Here come the Crosbys now."

"He Won't Bite." The "independent foursome," as Hope called it, "because we never get together after leaving the tee," was being slowed down by autograph seekers when Hope came up with a recent happening during one of his many golf matches.

"I overheard the boy say to a little girl, 'Go on and touch him; he won't bite.'"

"Then the girl said, 'Maybe he won't, but he might sting me with that nose of his.'"

When Hope got into a sandtrap, he smiled and didn't worry about getting out. "I've been used to sand since I made 'Road to Morocco,'" was the explanation.

"And have you noticed my new swing?" Bob asked during the walk down one fairway. "I call it the swing with the southern draw—slow and easy. Ed Dudley taught me that one."

Later, in the locker room, Hope was asked his schedule for the next few days. "Relaxing on a golf course," came the reply. "I've been going at top speed for weeks and I'm a bit whipped. Maybe if I can beat that Bobby Dodd, I'll feel better."

Bobby and Bob, with Morton Bright and Johnny Bulla, will do some feuding this afternoon at Capital City, according to present plans. Dodd, the Georgia Tech athletic coach, gave Hope trouble last year in a series of matches.

During Hope's visit they'll have plenty of time to settle their feud, because Hope, Jerry Colonna, Frances Langford, Vera Vague and the rest of the show expect to be here about three weeks, with headquarters at the Biltmore.

Shows already have been scheduled for the WAVES at Milledgeville Tuesday night and at Fort Benning on Tuesday of the following week. The troupe also expects to give shows at military posts and stations in Atlanta.

German Catholics Denounce Nazis' Anti-Christianity

NEW YORK, May 12.—(AP)—The German Catholic hierarchy has issued one of the strongest of its long series of denunciations against Nazi religious policy, the Office of War Information disclosed tonight.

C. R. Jenkins, Former Head of Wesleyan, Dies

BAKLEY, Ga., May 12.—(AP)—Dr. Charles R. Jenkins, former president of Wesleyan College, Macon, died today after a long illness.

He is survived by his wife; two sons, Alfred, of the U. S. Army, and Philip, of Baxley, and a daughter, Mrs. A. S. Griffith, of Chicago.

Dr. Jenkins, 71 years old, was president of Wesleyan College from 1912 to 1920.

He was one of Georgia's best-known Methodist preachers, having held pastorates throughout the South Georgia Conference, including four years at the Mulberry Street church in Macon and the Wesley Memorial church at Savannah.

He was admitted into the South Georgia Conference in 1900 and had 38 years of active service, retiring five years ago.

Dr. Jenkins first came to Wesleyan in 1904 as professor of Bible. He stayed until 1908, at which time he was elected a trustee and returned to preaching.

He remained a trustee until 1912. In 1910 he came back to the school as vice president, and then in 1912 assumed the presidency, following Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, who returned to a pastorate at that time.

It was during Dr. Jenkins' administration that Wesleyan became an accredited and was admitted to the Southern Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges and joined the Association of American Colleges.

Funeral services will be conducted in the Baxley Methodist church, Friday afternoon, with burial in the city cemetery.

Prisoners Act Like Yankees, Writes Pyle

There is not the slightest of the Italians, but rather an acceptance of defeat in a war well-fought—why be surly about it?

Germans Friendly.
They were friendly, very friendly. Being prisoners, it obviously paid them to be friendly, yet their friendliness seemed genuine. Just as when the French and Americans first met, the Germans started learning English words and teaching us German words.

But circumstances didn't permit much communion between them and our troops. Those Americans who came in direct contact with them gave necessary orders and herded them into trucks. All other Americans just stared curiously at these passers-by, who were very little fraternizing with prisoners.

I saw no acts of belligerence and heard neither boos nor cheers. But I did hear a hundred times: "This is the way it should be. Now we can go on from here."

Germans boys were as curious about us as we were about them. Every time I stopped a crowd would form quickly. In almost every group was one who spoke English. In all honesty I can't say their bearing or personality was a bit different from that of a similar bunch of American prisoners. They gave us their cigarettes and accepted ours, both for curiosity's sake. They examined the jeep, and asked questions about our uniforms. If you passed one walking alone, usually he would smile and speak.

U. S. Officer's Feelings.
One high American officer told me he found himself feeling sorry for them—until he remembered how they had killed so many of his men with their sneaking mines, how they had him pinned down a few days ago with bullets flying; then he hated them.

I am always a sucker for the guy who loses, but somehow it never occurred to me today to feel sorry for those prisoners. They needed any sorrowing over. They were loyal to their country and sorry they lost but, now it was over for them, they personally seemed glad to be out of it.

Tonight they still lounge by thousands in fields along the roads. Our trucks, and their, too, are not sufficient to haul them away. They will just have to wait their turn to be taken off to prison camps. No guards are necessary to keep them from running off into the darkness tonight. They have already done their running and now they await our pleasure, rather humbly and with a curious eagerness to see what comes next for them.

6 Dead, 22 Missing as Floods Rage in Oklahoma, Arkansas

POTEAU, Okla., May 12.—(AP)—At least six persons were drowned and 22, including seven soldiers, reported missing, as new chapters were added tonight to a week-long story of flood disaster in eastern Oklahoma.

Through a nature-enforced censorship of tangled communication lines came reports that the seven soldiers and four civilians disappeared in the muddy torrent of the rampaging Arkansas river when their boat rammed a bridge in the darkness near Keota.

Eleven persons, members of two families, were believed to have drowned as the floodtide swept their homes into the Arkansas. Twenty-five houses in that vicinity were washed away.

These mishaps brought the flood toll to six known dead, 22 missing, hundreds homeless, thousands of head of livestock lost and untold damage to bottomland crops.

18,000 Homeless in Arkansas.
FORT SMITH, Ark., May 12.—(AP)—More than 100 square miles of Arkansas river valley land were under water tonight, inundated by a flood that broke a 110-year record and burst or overflowed levees right and left.

In incorporated levee districts alone 60,000 acres, or 937 square miles, were inundated, U. S. engineers said. In addition several small communities and uncounted thousands of acres outside levee districts were flooded.

Fort Smith had 600 city blocks under water. About 18,000 persons between here and Pine Bluff are homeless or will be when the crest hits their communities, Army engineers said.

All railroad traffic in and out of Fort Smith was suspended and only one automobile road was open—U. S. 71 into the mountains south of here.

The huge conduit carrying Fort Smith and near-by Camp Chase's water supply broke today. Suspended under the Fort Smith-

Van Buren bridge whose floor was itself under from two to three feet of flood, the big pipe gave way presumably under the pressure of driftwood. Men with poles and pikes had patrolled the bridge since Monday pushing drift away from the pipe.

Holland said there was a six-day water supply in storage here, and it was hoped an emergency conduit could be completed before this was exhausted.

A crest of 41.8—3.8 feet higher than the previous record set in 1883—was recorded at noon and the river was expected to start falling possibly tonight.

Across the state to the east, the White river also was rampaging but not as spectacularly as the Arkansas.

At Calico Rock the White was slowly receding today.

Black Recaptured at Morrow; Tries To Buy Gun to Escape

Atlanta Sleuth Takes Fugitive Single-Handed

D. C. Black, notorious Georgia escape artist, who was recaptured yesterday in a field near Morrow, Ga., was returned to Tattnell prison last night after he had "propositioned" a Negro sandwich vendor to buy him a pistol.

Black, captured single-handed by Detective Raymond Ector, who shot a warning spray of submachinegun fire about the fugitive's feet when he attempted to run, offered the vendor $100 for the weapon.

The Negro, employed in a restaurant near police headquarters, was making his round with a basket of sandwiches and soft drinks when he came to the third floor, where Black was in solitary confinement.

He quoted Black as saying: "Come here, boy. Get me a pistol on your next trip and I'll give you $100."

Authorities Notified.
The Negro notified authorities, and Black, who was not scheduled to be returned to Tattnell until today, was taken to Reidsville by Major C. H. Millens, deputy commissioner of the State Department of Public Safety, and state patrolmen.

Black also enlisted his brief stay at Atlanta police headquarters by "cracking wise" to Turnkey C. W. Mauldin that "this place would be easy to break out of." When this remark was told to Station Lieutenant T. O. Cawthon, the lieutenant seated himself in a chair in front of Black's cell and announced: "I'm not leaving here until you're on your way to Tattnell."

Led Mass Break.
Black, who, with Leland Harvey and Forrest Turner, led a mass break of 25 convicts from Tattnell several weeks ago, was captured when Ector stalked his prey a quarter of a mile across an open field. Black had a .38-caliber automatic pistol in his possession when captured.

He and Harvey escaped recently from the Bibb county jail at Macon when a Negro purchased a weapon for them, police here recalled as they expressed the opinion Black sought to "try this stunt again."

Although Detective D. C. Vaughn, Major C. H. Millens, deputy commissioner of the State Department of Public Safety; Captain W. E. Spence, head of the

TRAIL'S END—D. C. Black, notorious Georgia escapee, is shown (center) at Atlanta police headquarters. He is flanked by Detective Raymond Ector (left), who captured him single-handed in a field near Morrow, Ga., yesterday, and Detective D. C. Vaughn. Black said he hid in a barn near a farmhouse for several days.

Georgia Bureau of Investigation and Sergeant W. C. McLenore, of the GBI, were along on the hunt. Ector was the man who spotted the fugitive and tracked him down.

"None of Our Bunch."
Black told a reporter for The Constitution that "none of our bunch" made the telephone call to the Governor's mansion threatening to kidnap Arnall's 5-year-old son, Alvin.

"It must have been some damn fool made that call," said Black. "None of our bunch would think of doing such a thing."

Detectives Ector and Vaughn, Major Millens, Captain Spence and Sergeant McLenore hurried to Morrow on a tip that Black was hiding in a barn several hundred yards behind a farmhouse.

When the police arrived near the farmhouse, they split up. The purpose was to surround the barn where Black was said to have been hiding.

Spotted in Field.
Ector, carrying a submachinegun, moved cautiously across a field and spotted Black. The fugitive was not aware of the presence of the armed detective, but was leisurely strolling across the field. Ector changed his direction, crouching low, cutting diagonally across the field in an effort to head off Black.

Black, apparently sensing someone was stalking him, ducked for cover among some vines. When Ector came within about 50 yards of his quarry, he raised the submachinegun to his shoulder and shouted for Black to halt and put up his hands. Black did not comply with this command.

It was then Detective Ector opened fire with the submachinegun. Bullets sprayed the ground at Black's feet. Black raised his hands skyward and kept them there. Ector approached him, and asked him if he was armed.

"Gun No Good Now."
"Yeah," he quoted Black as saying, "I got a gun. But it's no good now."

Ector then marched him back to the other officers. The barn in which Black said he hid for several days was near a small lake. He disclosed he had bathed frequently in the lake. He was wearing a khaki suit and a khaki hat. His face was tanned, and he had the look of a man who had been outdoors for some time.

Black was bundled into an automobile and driven to the Atlanta police station. He was a bit messed up, and declined to pose for newspaper photographers until he had "cleaned up." This done, however, he posed without compunction.

In the interview with The Constitution reporter, Black said yesterday this was the first time he had been in Atlanta since the mass break at Tattnell. He denied knowledge of, or participation in, the holdup last week of the Atlanta Woolen Mills commissary on Stewart avenue in which $2,500 was taken.

Speaking of the Tattnell break, Black said "some one had a key, but it was good for only one cell block. It was not a skeleton key." He admitted whisky was made on the prison premises, but said "as for women, there was seldom, if any, incident of that kind."

"If a man's wife came to see him on a visiting Sunday," he went on, "and she could prove she was his wife, he could see her all right. But it was in the prison lobby and in the presence of guards. He could talk to her. That was all."

"A couple of electricians did have free run of the prison, but their job was to keep the lights in good shape."

He also said the persons living at the farmhouse were not aware of his presence. Asked how he managed to eat, he simply laughed and let the question remain unanswered.

It was at this point in the interview that Superintendent of Detectives J. A. McKibben came along. He asked Black: "Feel better?" And Black replied: "I feel more at home."

Black was serving more than 100 years for automobile larceny and robbery. He has a record of six escapes.

Russians Roll Back Nazis in Lower Donets

LONDON, Thursday, May 13.—(P)—A new Red army thrust rolled back German armor Wednesday on the lower Donets front midway between Kharkov and Rostov, Moscow announced early today.

Heavy Russian guns thundered in the Caucasus meanwhile to wreck some of the last German defense lines northeast of Novorossisk, said the midnight communiqué as recorded by the Soviet monitor. The big barrage was perhaps intended to pave the way for a Soviet drive to clean up the Kuban delta.

A special broadcast also told of continued Russian aerial blows heavily damaging 12 more communications centers behind the German lines.

The Russians identified the sector of their new lower Donets front advance as near Lisichansk. More than 600 Germans were killed in the Lisichansk area fighting, said the Russian communiqué.

Aerial battles swirled in the sky with the Russians still holding the edge. The communiqué said 18 German planes were destroyed to a loss of five Soviet ships.

The Germans, in a broadcast recorded by the Associated Press, indicated intense fighting in the Kuban, claiming the Russians lost nearly 30,000 killed and wounded. The day brought a uniform Russian reaction to the Washington war conferences of Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt: the assumption that it presaged a second front.

TIRE EXPERT SOLVES FLAT HIGHBALL PROBLEM

G. Nailhole Pumphard, auto mechanic, patched up a bad situation today. "Melting Ice was making my highballs flatter than the label on that Whodunnit Club Soda my wife bought," said Pumphard. "All the sparkle leaked out of my drink. That gave me a wrench."

"Now I use only Canada Dry Water. Its 'PIN-POINT CARBONATION' gives sparkle to spare—from rim to bottom—and I'd tread a mile for the delicious flavor Canada Dry's special formula gives drinks. Try it!"

Byrnes Restores WLB Power To Make Wage Adjustments

WASHINGTON, May 12.—(AP)—Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes today restored some of the War Labor Board's discretionary authority to make wage adjustments in addition to those permitted under the 15 per cent Little Steel formula and the correction of "substandards."

The President's hold-the-line order of April 8 had limited the board's authority to these two categories and the board had complained that the order was "unworkable" unless clarified.

The board now may raise wages "to aid in the prosecution of the war or correct gross inequities," with the limitation that such adjustments must not cause price risks or stand in the way of price reductions.

Details of Directive. Byrnes' policy directive permits the board to determine in each labor market or area what is the representative, tested range of rates for each occupation, or class of work. It may find in Detroit, for instance, that the tested range of rates for machinists is 90 cents to $1.10 an hour. These are not necessarily the extremes of the rates that are paid. There may be both higher and lower rates paid, but only those below 90 cents could be adjusted upward. They would be raised only to the 90-cent figure.

Food Administrator Chester Davis, meanwhile, was quoted by a CIO delegation from New York as stating that it was impossible to roll back food prices as pledged by Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown, but this was later denied by J. B. Russell, Davis' assistant.

Remark Clarified. The delegation said this attitude expressed by Davis "in a three-minute conference" was in sharp contrast to what the group was told by President Roosevelt. Economic Chief Byrnes and Brown. Russell, in denying Davis had told the CIO group retail prices could not be rolled back, stated that what Davis had told them was that the War Foods Administration intended to "use all its power to relieve pressure against retail food prices at whatever level they are set under the hold-the-line policy."

BARNESVILLE, Ga., May 12.—A large group of members of the Woman's Missionary Society of the First Baptist church gathered there Tuesday for an all-day mission study.

Mrs. Emmett Langford, president of the society, was in charge of the meeting, and presented Mrs. J. E. Guilbeau, who spoke on the book, "They Need Not Go Away."

The Ration Counter...

Your questions about all phases of the various rationing programs will be answered authoritatively by the Ration Counter. Telephone your question: to WAlnut 3876 between the hours of 10 a. m. and 6 p. m. inquiries by mail must be accompanied by a self-addressed, stamped envelope. They should be addressed to the Ration Counter, care The Constitution, Atlanta.

Hints that there will be an increase in the coffee rations have been coming out of Washington lately, and the prospects are still bright, OPA officials said yesterday, but no definite decision is expected for at least another week.

Officials said that there had been discussions of the possibility of boosting the present ration of one pound of coffee every five weeks to one pound for every four weeks or one pound a month. Present supplies of coffee are sufficient for the increase in rations, but before any action can be taken studies must be made to determine what future supplies will be.

Prentiss M. Brown, in a recent statement, said that an increase was likely.

Customers Urged To Check Grades of Each Cut of Meat

Specific dollars and cents ceiling prices on beef, veal, lamb and mutton, which will be a definite step toward controlling the cost of living for Americans, are announced in this morning's Constitution.

Each of these meats is divided into five classes according to the quality of the cuts. They are designated as AA, choice; A, good; B, commercial; C, utility; and D, cull.

Butchers are required to post these ceilings, but really to profit by them, customers should check carefully the grades of meat which are clearly stamped in purple ink on each cut of meat.

One Atlanta housewife called The Constitution yesterday to point out a reason why some people may have fallen down in their contributions of waste fats.

"I have turned in 12 pounds of fats altogether," she said, "but every time I did so my butcher acted as if I were bothering him with them. He did not seem very glad at all to take the fats I had brought."

Take Fats To Butchers
During First Part of Week
Butchers and meat dealers are working at a feverlike pitch these days to meet the difficulties which meat rationing has brought to them. They are faced with more customers now than they have seen in a long time, and they have to try to satisfy them with less meat than they had in normal times.

In their distraction, they may appear rather short with the housewives who come to them with a pound of fat.

If possible, customers should call on them with fat contributions toward the first of the week when they are usually less busy than near the weekend.

Men, Women in Armed Forces May Get Gas on Furloughs

An announcement to the men and women in the armed forces was made yesterday by OPA.

All those people who come home on furloughs or leaves for three or more days will be issued gasoline allotments of from one to five gallons if other means of transportation are not considered adequate for their personal errands by the local ration board.

This plan, worked out by Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson, OPA and representatives of the other armed forces, will go into effect Friday.

Gasoline Will Be Issued
In One Gallon Certificates
The gasoline will be issued by the boards in one-gallon certificates for regular gasoline ration books.

In making the provisions, OPA officials pointed out that it was being done so that service men and women would be able to make necessary personal errands in the limited time they were home.

OPA emphasized that there was no increase in the supplies of either gasoline or rubber to warrant these additional rations for such travelers. Boards were warned, therefore, that granting the rations to service men and women means that they must examine all the more carefully requests for supplemental or special rations from civilians.

Pork Also in Limelight
Under New Price Ceilings
When the new ceiling prices on lamb, beef, veal and mutton become effective Monday, pork will also be in the limelight.

Maximum retail prices on processed ham with the bone in and processed picnic ham will be rolled back by from one to three cents a pound.

Also on Monday butchers will be permitted to slice one-third of each ham for center-cut slices instead of only one-fifth as before. This change was made because many customers wanted a piece of ham but had only enough points to buy a slice—not enough for an entire end.

Arnall Wants Yoo-Hoo Lear Georgia Taken Into the Union Hits a Snag

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 12.—(AP)—Lashing at "unfair freight rates" and the system of making federal grants to states on a matching basis, Governor Arnall of Georgia told the Florida legislature tonight the south must insist that "it will no longer be an exploited section."

"No matter how much we work to develop the future of our own states, our efforts will amount to nothing unless we get fair treatment and redress from our federal government," he declared.

"I am more interested in the people of our section than any possible candidate for President or Vice President. I hope those who pretend to be our friends will help us."

"I am going to keep talking, and make myself as irritating as I can" until the south gets recognition for its problems, Governor Arnall declared during an address which Florida legislators invited him to deliver.

"We must do away with the system of discriminatory freight rates in the south. How are we going to convert our war plants to peace-time industries unless we are given the privilege of competing in an open and free market with the rest of the nation?"

"All we ask is that these economic shackles be released. If they are, we will excel the rest of the nation in industry. We have all the God-given advantages, and against them we have one man-made regulation that is hampering southern progress."

"We want the federal government to take us into the union."

City Firemen Will Roundup Old 'Jalopies' To Be Launched in Atlanta

A round-up of scrapped motor vehicles of the "jalopy" class will be undertaken by Atlanta's 324 firemen, it was disclosed yesterday following a meeting of firemen with WPB officials.

The city firemen will be assisted in the campaign by scores of junior fire inspectors in the city school system.

WPB officials pointed out that there is enough scrap steel in the average junked jalopy to help build 16 17-mm. guns or 27 three-inch mortars or 35 .50-caliber mortars or 27 20-mm. antiaircraft guns, and that reclaimed rubber from one of the scrapped vehicles will furnish enough rubber, when supplemented by crude rubber, to provide all rubber needed on a Flying Fortress.

Fire Chief Styron pledged the support of every man in the department, and said a house-to-house canvass will be inaugurated, with each fire station charged with spotting all abandoned cars in their respective neighborhoods.

Successful similar drives already have been conducted in Augusta, Savannah, Columbus, Macon and other Georgia cities.

Hi-Yo, Silver! State Finally Pays for It

After more than 25 years, the state has finished paying for the ornate silver service that on a rode the high seas on the battleship Georgia and that now graces the executive mansion.

In accordance with a resolution enacted by the last general assembly, State Auditor B. E. Thrasher Jr. said yesterday the state has paid the long-overdue balance of $2,600 to the heirs of Charles W. Crankshaw, the Atlanta jeweler from whom the silver was bought.

Funds were raised by popular subscription in 1907 to buy the silver service for the battleship. The money that was raised fell $1,500 short of the cost of $7,515, and the state was to pay the balance.

Only this year, however, did the legislature provide for the payment of the $1,500, plus 2 1/2 per cent interest.

processing branch of WPB, explained the program as follows: Firemen will search out the abandoned machines, reporting its make and condition on cards provided for the purpose. The cards will be turned over to WPB with a notation as to whether the owner wishes to donate outright or to give it to WPB if he wishes, but the government will pay for it. WPB then will follow up and see that the machine is acquired.

Murder Trial Witness Gets Twenty Days

"For repeatedly violating the instructions of the court" in answering questions during the trial of murder, J. W. Harmon was sentenced yesterday to serve 20 days in jail for contempt of court by Judge Walter C. Hendrix.

A witness for the defense, Harmon failed, in answering questions by attorneys, to tell merely what he knew, but aroused the ire of the judge by injecting into his answers what others have told him. After several warnings, Judge Hendrix sent the jury out of the courtroom and imposed the 20-day sentence.

Evans went on trial in Fulton superior court yesterday charged with the murder of Homer Henry Mixon on March 3 at an Ivy street hotel. According to the evidence, Mixon bled to death after being stabbed.

The case will be continued this morning.

A Step in Democracy

There is now pending in the United States senate a bill known as the Thomas bill, Senate Bill 637, which would provide a federal fund to be used for the equalization of educational opportunity in the various states.

The bill, safeguarding the freedom of education from political and federal control, contains a clause which specifically guarantees full state and local control of the schools and colleges. It is simply a measure to help bring to each child in the United States a truer share in the theories and ideals of democracy, by more nearly equalizing opportunity through education.

Today it is unfortunately true that children in the financially poorer states suffer serious discrimination, in that their states are unable to bring to them that quality of schooling which children in the richer states enjoy. This situation is aggravated by the fact that it is universally true that the number of children per family is much higher in the poorer states, thus again lowering the amount of tax money available, per capita, for the children in school.

The only way this injustice can be remedied is by federal appropriation for an equalization fund, whereby the taxpayers of the richer states would contribute to help the poorer states improve their schools to a level nearer that enjoyed by their wealthier sister states.

So long as the accident of birth dooms millions of American children to such restricted educational opportunity, the basic principle of American democracy, equality of opportunity for all, is flatly denied in the most important of all services to the citizen, that of basic education for meeting the problems of life.

A child so handicapped can never, throughout its entire life as an adult, enjoy the equality of opportunity which is proclaimed in the foundations of our form of government.

Nor must it be imagined that, in thus contributing to the better education of children in other states, the richer states are not benefiting themselves. More than half the native citizens of this country spend their adult lives in states other than those in which they were born. It thus becomes true that the migratory habits of Americans make most of us, in actual fact, more truly citizens of the nation than we are citizens of the individual states. Thus the ill-educated child may well become the responsibility of a far distant state when he is a man.

The Thomas Bill provides for only $300,000,000 to be put into the proposed educational equalization fund. This is a small amount in proportion to the extent of the problem, but it is a beginning. It will, if passed, mark a long step forward in the progress of the nation toward realization of that democracy we have always acclaimed but of which we have as yet fallen far short in practice.

True democracy calls for the removal of all inequities in all relationships between the citizen and the social order under which he lives.

Nothing is more important than the removal of inequities in education, inequities which doom children of one state or section to lifelong handicap in their participation in the competitive struggle for survival and success.

Artificial Islands

The announced plan of the Pennsylvania Central Airlines for the construction, after the war, of giant "seadromes" floating in the Atlantic, to be used at landing fields and air bases for transoceanic aircraft, provides a startling glimpse at the world of the near future which will come with dramatic force to most Americans.

Yet the idea is far from new. Ever since the development of heavier-than-air flying craft, engineers have envisioned such a system to make safe airborne traffic over the wide areas of ocean.

The type of seadrome proposed now is said to be so large and so constructed it would be not only immune to the worst storms the elements could bring about, but also there would be neither roll nor pitch to the islands of steel. Hotels for the comfort of travelers are, even, visualized as built upon these artificial islands.

It is a challenging vision, a startling picture of conditions which may become routine to everyday life in the new world coming after the war is won.

Close Partnership

The arrival of Prime Minister Winston Churchill, accompanied by a staff of military strategists, in this country for further conferences with President Roosevelt and American war leaders, demonstrates once again that the two great English-speaking nations are working in closest possible co-operation for the utter defeat of their foes of the Axis nations.

Speculation as to the detailed purposes of the present meetings is futile. It would be wildest folly if the plans made at such conferences were given to the public. That would be playing directly into the hands of the enemy.

However, commentators have stuck close to the obvious in surmising the chief discussions at Washington will deal with the coming invasion of Axis Europe. To say that plans for such an invasion have not already been worked out would be absurd. We know that in the highest circles of Allied strategy and in the headquarters of the combined military and naval staffs, invasion blueprints must have been worked out months ago.

The quick victory in Tunisia, giving us unchallenged control of all Africa and dominance over the Mediterranean, brings the day of invasion very near. We, the average men and women of America, do not know what hour we shall read dispatches telling the landing of Allied troops at one or more points of the European mainland.

Whatever the decisions to be made at the Roosevelt-Churchill conference now underway in Washington, the closeness in co-operation and the harmony of joint planning between our own leaders and those of the British peoples should serve to strengthen our faith in ultimate victory and our determination to fight until the enemies are completely crushed.

Will Require Adjustments

It is self-evident that the action of the Atlanta Board of Education in voting earlier hours for the opening of the schools, beginning next fall, will require readjustment in the "staggered hours" system which has, so far, proved highly effective in solving the city's wartime problem of public transportation.

It cannot be denied that, by changing the school opening hour from 9:45 a. m. to 9 o'clock, thousands of children will require streetcar and bus transportation at the same time that the majority of adult workers are traveling to their jobs. This situation will probably be further aggravated, by fall, by thousands of Atlantans who will then be employed at the giant Bell Bomber plant and who will thus add to the transportation difficulties.

The "staggered hours" system, under which different classifications of business start their day at different hours, thus spreading the load of workers using the cars and buses, has worked splendidly. It was worked out by the Chamber of Commerce when gasoline rationing forced many who had driven their own cars to the city daily, to depend upon public transportation vehicles.

At that time, the schools co-operated by making their opening hours later. The board of education now proposes to change back to the earlier hour in order to permit older students who are capable of employment to accept positions after school hours in the afternoons.

Undoubtedly the merchants of the city are suffering a serious shortage of workers and undoubtedly the school plan will prove of great assistance, especially during rush seasons such as the weeks preceding Christmas.

It simply places a new problem before transportation officials who, unable to secure additional equipment in wartime, must so use what they have to provide for all who must ride.

Georgia Editors Say:

ANOTHER DAY COMING

(From The Valdosta Times)

It is too early to tell whether John L. Lewis, forced to call a truce in his war against the United States, will yet emerge with substantially what he went after.

If he loses this fight, it will be the first he has lost. Always before, when things looked blackest for him, he has managed to Houdini himself and his mine workers out with pecuniary benefits, whoever might claim superficial honors.

Whether Lewis or President Roosevelt wins this strike, labor unionism already has lost. Hundreds of unions, millions of workers who are in no way involved, who respect labor's pledges against strikes, who would not think of hampering our soldiers and sailors and marines by holding up production, are victims of Lewis' attitude.

Anything John L. Lewis may have done in the past to advance the cause of the workingman has been written off the books now. He has become organized labor's Number One liability for the post-war future.

WASHINGTON PARADE

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

WHERE INVASION? WASHINGTON, May 12.—Final defeat of the Axis forces in Tunisia has opened the way for an Allied invasion of Europe. Where and when the blow will be struck is the uppermost question in the public mind. No one outside of the Allied high command can give the answer, but the most intensive speculation exists.

By clearing the Axis out of their last remaining stronghold in Africa, the Allies are given an additional thousand miles or more of coastline to use as a springboard in launching the grand assault on Hitler.

It is to be presumed that shortly we will be in full control of the Mediterranean, enabling us to strike at one of a dozen points of the European military objectives or to start to clean up most of the major islands in the area, but this task should be simplified by the fall of Tunisia.

Hitler evidently looked upon our invasion of Africa as the forerunner of a move to attack his European fortress through the Mediterranean. It is inconceivable he would have deliberately sacrificed a quarter of a million men in what was never anything more than a delaying action.

He needed the time to build up his southern European fortifications against the day when we might strike there. Until we moved into North Africa last November all of his preparations had been on the Atlantic side. Vast defensive works had been thrown up all the way from Norway to the Spanish border in France. During the six months since November we must suppose he has extended these works to the Mediterranean as well.

FOUGHT FOR TIME That was the one controlling aim of the vigorous resistance put up by Axis forces in Africa—to delay us until their fortifications could be built.

While circumstances thus point to Africa being used as the springboard for the main attack on Europe, there are other reasons for believing the assault will not take this direction at all, except perhaps as a collateral move.

Military observers who have studied the technique employed by the Allies in the battle of Tunisia see in it the cue to an invasion on an entirely different front.

OVER THE CHANNEL? As a result, predictions are now being made in some well-informed military quarters that, when the invasion of Europe is undertaken, it will be launched not from the Mediterranean or against Norway, but at what is regarded to be the strongest point of Hitler's fortifications: that section of France or Holland which lies directly across the English channel.

The cue afforded by the battle of Tunisia is in the devastating work of Allied air forces after gaining undisputed supremacy over the Germans. Heavily fortified and mined areas which the Germans counted on to hold us back at strategic points were pulverized by one of the greatest demonstrations of air power the war has yet seen.

When our bombers got through working the area over, there wasn't a living thing to stop us. Aerial bombs were exploded every few square yards. This destroyed the mine fields as well as every other form of resistance the Germans had devised. After the bombardment our tanks and men were able to go through the strongly defended area as though it were nothing more than a plowed field.

GROUND PREPARATION That, it is said, is precisely the way we will prepare the ground for an invasion of the continent. It doesn't matter what fortifications Hitler has built on the European side of the English channel, nor to what depths they extend. So long as we have undisputed air supremacy we will be able to pulverize an area sufficiently large to lay down an invasion force.

Apparently the Allies now have the necessary degree of air superiority. Hitler, for more than a year now, has been carefully hoarding his air resources against the day when he will need it to oppose an invasion. With all of his hoarding, however, no one believes his Luftwaffe is equal to the occasion.

EASIER ON SHIPPING Despite the fact that France and Holland are supposed to be the most strongly fortified points on the Atlantic side of the continent, there are many reasons why it would be far more preferable to launch the invasion here. The most important of these is shipping.

To supply an invasion force stemming from the Mediterranean, a vast amount of tonnage would be necessary—infinite greater than would be involved in the narrow passage across the English channel. Something of the same thing would be true if the second front were established in Norway, a distance of several hundred miles from the nearest English bases.

COULD USE BARGES But across the channel to France or Holland we could transport most of our men and supplies by landing barges, if necessary. These fast shallow-draft boats are invulnerable to submarine attack and are capable of negotiating any kind of waters. They are made to order for that kind of an expedition.

It may or may not be significant that we have been building them by the hundreds, and that congress just the other day was asked to appropriate more than a billion dollars additional for further barge construction of the kind.

In the light of all this, it may not be a bad guess to place the scene of the second front in France or the Low Countries. Our combined air forces can be relied upon, it seems, to pulverize an area sufficiently large to lay down an invading army with no more than minimum costs. And, once our men get on the other side, they can be relied on to hold their own against anything the Germans have to offer. We showed that in Tunisia.

Culled From The Mail.

Letter received criticizing southern habit of remembering the War Between the States. Writer says he is "damned" here for the last six months or so.

Postscript to letter says: "If you publish this, I will be surprised."

He will not be surprised. For his letter is unsigned. If he cares to repeat it, with his name attached, there is no reason why it should not be published, no reason why it should occasion surprise to him or anyone else.

Letter And Clipping.

From C. Cornwall, of Alto, Georgia, the following letter:

"Editor, Constitution: This clipping from the Halifax Couriers and Guardian, of Halifax, Yorkshire, England, will show you what they do with those who do not go 'all out' in England."

A "fitter" is called a "machinist" here; he is a tool maker. Conroy lives five miles from his work. Mullen the same and Caldwell about two miles. They work 54 hours per week.

"When you think of our babies Sacred Unioners and the way this administration pampers naytodies to the union card, one is tempted to ask, does the country know there is a war on? Judging from figures on absenteeism, one wonders. Surely a man can put out 40 hours at top speed in a week, especially when he is saving his own skin, and further, can stick to his job, even if he does not like his foreman."

"Yours Truly,"

"C. CORNWALL."

The clipping inclosed with the letter:

Three fitters were each fined nine pounds—three pounds on each of three counts—at Brighouse on Wednesday for persistent lateness and absenteeism from essential work.

The accused were:

John Conroy, of 5, Cavendish-terrace, Halifax; Bernard John Mullen, of 63, Park-terrace, Stump Cross, and Ronald Caldwell, of Hove Edge, Brighouse.

Conroy denied the charges, but the other two pleaded "Guilty." The period of persistent lateness in each case was from October 1 to December 29, last year.

Conroy pleaded fatigue, excessive traveling and Home Guard duties; Mullen put forward the plea of tiredness and lumbago; Caldwell gave no explanation.

From U. S. Treasury.

Letter from Eugene W. Sloan, executive director of the War Savings staff of the Treasury Department at Washington.

He reports on the effect upon War Bond sales of quarterly income tax payments.

This is interesting, because lots of people have argued that bond sales are certain to drop in months when income tax payments must be made and, further, that the need of cash for these tax payments will force many persons to cash in bonds they have previously bought.

Well, the Sloan letter removes any anxiety on these scores.

The first tax installment fell due as we all know well, in March. That month showed bond sales higher by 6.4 per cent than they were the preceding month, February, and 65 per cent higher than March, 1942, when income tax rates were much lower.

War Bonds, then called Defense Bonds, first went on sale on May 1, 1941. Through March 31 of this year the total redemptions, or cashing in, of the bonds, has been less than 3 1/2 per cent of the total sales. And during March of this year, when the first quarterly payment on the new, heavy income taxes fell due, bond redemptions amounted to only .87 of one per cent of the total amount outstanding. Less than one per cent for that special month.

There's a record all of us, as Americans, can boast about.

That shows the nation, as a whole, realizes that the winning of the war necessitates not only the paying of taxes and the buying of bonds. But the necessity, too, of keeping the bonds after we've bought 'em.

And, did you notice that the Second War Loan, conducted in April with a national goal of thirteen billions to be sold, reached a total of more than eighteen billions—more than the first Treasury Department to defer, by a month, the time when we will be asked to subscribe to the Third War Loan.

Atlanta and Georgia did full share in the record. The state almost doubled its quota and

A Burglar And the Draft

LOS ANGELES, May 12.—I have a letter on the stationery of the Selective Service System, Local Board No. 3, Washington county, Pa., signed Charles D. Seaton. He represents that he is a member of the board with jurisdiction over the classification of Joseph Yablonski of California, Pa., a burglar, who is a member of the international executive board, or national governing body, of John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers. This burglar is also chairman of Rationing Board No. 6, of Washington county, Pa.

Yablonski, who is 32 years old and physically strong, was very active in the recent coal strike. At one point during the sabotage he remarked proudly, "the coal that will be mined today" can all be sold at one small corner drug store." He is a member of the Lewis faction in an area where there has been great rank and file opposition to the big boss. He was elected to the International Executive Board with the support of the national office although his record as a criminal was thoroughly publicized and doubtless was well known to Lewis.

The letter from Mr. Seaton says the local draft board is gravely concerned with the "atmosphere of trickery and shallowness that you have tried to create in your article with respect to 'the operation of Selective Service in their classification of registrants.'"

"I am permitted to say," writes Mr. Seaton, that Yablonski lives in a family relationship with his wife and two minor children born well within the limits as prescribed by selective service for dependents.

Held as "Minor Claim"

The dispatch desires to challenge did not concern itself seriously with the question of dependency as a ground for deferment of this criminal. On the contrary it observed that "dependency would be a minor claim" in this case, inferior to his claim for deferment enjoyed in furthering the war effort. His helpfulness in the maintenance of good labor relations and the prosecution of the war was demonstrated by the fact of a large number of miners at California, Pa., his immediate bailiwick, during the recent defiance of the national government. He also helped maintain good labor relations and to advance the preparations for war by assisting Lewis in the captive coal-mining strike in 1941, shortly before Pearl Harbor, in which issue was a demand for a closed shop.

In that case President Roosevelt gave a solemn assurance to the non-union miners and their nation as a whole, amounting to a vow, that he would not order nor would congress enact any law imposing the closed shop and adding, gratuitously, that such would be Hitler's way. A few weeks later, in violation of this vow, President Roosevelt did adopt Hitler's way and the non-union miners were delivered into the control of a man with a police record of numerous entries, including a plea of guilty to a charge of burglary and a jail sentence for this crime.

"Big Shot" Such, then, is the actual validity of Yablonski's right

In UMW to deferment as a union boss, and not as a petty local gangster either, but as one who occupies in the mine workers a position equal to that of a member of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor.

He is, thanks to the support of the John L. Lewis faction, a big shot in the mine workers by reason of an election which was denounced by reputable officials of the union as "the most disgraceful campaigning in the history of the UMW," which was taking in a lot of territory.

As to the validity of any claim of dependency which may have been made by Yablonski in his dispatch which Mr. Seaton has challenged set forth that Yablonski's attitude toward his family responsibility had in the past been casual as cited.

The fact is that in April, 1936, he was not supporting his wife and one minor child and therefore was ordered by the court to pay six dollars a week. If another child has since appeared Yablonski's responsibility would now appear to be nine dollars a week, an amount which he might provide as a soldier. He gets $500 a month as a unioner.

Although Mr. Seaton emphasizes the dubious claim of dependency by a man once prosecuted for non-support, he insists nevertheless that Yablonski is a neighbor, who, accidentally, is a man of power in the union terror which rules the community. Is by law and regulation sentenced to special consideration for deferment as a union boss.

Can't Argue This Point

Although Mr. Seaton emphasizes the dubious claim of dependency by a man once prosecuted for non-support, he insists nevertheless that Yablonski is a neighbor, who, accidentally, is a man of power in the union terror which rules the community. Is by law and regulation sentenced to special consideration for deferment as a union boss.

Although Yablonski's union activities have been such as to help reduce the coal output to an amount which could be sold in a drug store. I can't argue with Mr. Seaton on that point. Like it or lump it that is the law and the regulation.

Apart from such questions there remains the fact, astounding no doubt, to most decent Americans, that this criminal, because of his power as a unioner, could be selected chairman of his rationing board, a federal position of great responsibility and trust.

Another fact of interest is that Mr. Lewis' criminal subordinate and henchman recently has been driving a new Buick, allowed no doubt in obedience to the OPA's political dictum that union gangsters deserve, for their help, in the war effort, in addition to exemption from the draft, special considerations in the allocation of cars, tires and gasoline. As chairman of the rationing board, of course, the burglar's own opinion would have considerable weight in the board's decision on his requirements.

The city came close to tripling the amount assigned to it. There's nothing to apologize for when it comes to financial support of the war.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

A MYTH DIES There is more dying on Cap Bon than is reported in the casualty lists of the Americans, the French and the British.

A myth, a legend, is dying. The myth, the legend of the invincible German soldier; the superman come in armor, with bombs screaming from the sky; with the roar of machinery about him—that myth and that legend is dying.

He was invincible when men poorly trained and ill-equipped were against him. He was invincible as long as he had the guns and the tanks and when the foe before him was not merely poorly trained, badly equipped, but also confused by his leadership.

But, lo, on the plains of Africa and in the hills of Cap Bon, he has been, and is, running for his life. He is surrendering by the thousands. He is brave, as the Dutch and the French and the Belgians were brave who stood and fought in the early days. He is brave as the English were brave who stood and fought on the way toward Dunkirk and who stood against him in the shattering days when the myth still lived and Rommel was leading them in Africa.

He is learning, as his enemies learned, that bravery is not enough.

There is this difference. He is a trained soldier and he is in physical condition for fighting, as his enemies—our Allies—were not at the start of the war.

Yet he must run like a rabbit and hide in foxholes and ditches. He, now, must look the sky black with the planes of his enemies, and curse his own country as did the French, the British, the Dutch and the Belgians when they hid in holes and saw no planes of their own in the sky to do combat with the foe. He is learning.

It is true, too, that the myth was badly shaken in the Russian campaigns. It got its fatal sickness there. But only in Africa is it dying. In Russia the Germans were forced back. Never did they run, throwing away equipment, and never did they quit as they have in Africa.

A BEATEN ARMY This is a beaten army that makes its last stand in Africa. It is an army which Hitler kept supplying to the very last in every way that he could. It was an army which had as good generalship as the Germans could supply.

And now it dies. Its generals, some of them, come in weeping and asking for generous terms. The men who have seen what they have done to the innocent peoples are not inclined to be generous. They are merciful, but not generous.

The terms are unconditional surrender. It is the first beaten army Germany has had in this war. In Russia the army is being forced back. But it still fights. It is intact. It is losing in a battle of attrition. But it still fights.

This army is beaten, routed, captured, destroyed. The myth dies with it. True, we had the more planes, the more tanks. It is the first time we have had them.

But this was an army which was outgeneraled. The Germans could not use what armor they had. They were flanked, they had wedges driven into their lines. They were not whipped by sheer weight of planes alone. They were outgeneraled.

One can understand the weeping. The German generals weep over the death of their own legend, their own personal myth in which they had come to believe.

INVASION? No one can know when the next step, invasion, will come. Or where. It may be through Finland, with a juncture there with Russian troops. It might come in northern Italy. It might strike almost anywhere.

It would be a mistake to hurry it too much. Keep in mind that there must be shipped with each soldier about 60 tons of equipment and food. This must be kept coming as he needs that in the days immediately after his landing. Our troops who landed in Africa, as well-planned as was that invasion, lived hard for the first few weeks.

There must be a constant going and coming of ships to whatever invasion bridgeheads we establish. They will be costly. The German submarine is far from conquered.

It is important that we not let the German myth come alive. They are selling the Germans a new myth to replace the old one. Now they are saying, "They cannot invade us. We are invulnerable. They cannot get in."

We cannot hurry it too much, and yet we cannot wait until the spirit of revolt in the conquered countries is extinguished. We cannot wait until all the potential Fifth Columns are broken and killed.

In this little moment it is possible to realize how great is the strain on our general staff and on the President of the United States. In this little moment all Americans must see what a man-killing job it is to be President and to have all the burden of war and of the domestic quarrels on the shoulders of one man.

It is one of the great moments of the war. A myth and a legend have died. Our plans, in the making for weeks and months, are unfolding. Right now ships are moving, messages are filling the air, men are giving orders.

When and where they will strike will be made known to us one of these days or nights when the plan has been put into operation and has succeeded or failed.

We can but hope it will succeed.

An Ordinary Man Plus Opportunity Equal a Big Shot

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

Because I am serving on the Fulton grand jury a couple of days a week—from 10 to 2 or thereabouts—I thought it a fine idea to get down to the shop around 8 a. m. on those days and put in a lick or two, to be finished up after adjournment.

It hasn't worked so well. Because nobody else on a morning paper has waked up at that hour. Certainly nobody is around except a janitor and a man trying to make a baseball ticker tick.

And visitors—most of them quite pleasant. Calling on the newspaper shop to get that off their minds before the stores open. I'm discovering how ignorant I am about newspaper work in general. I used to know, but I've lost track of the routine.

Most of the callers are women, desirous of inserting an item—all written out—about a wedding. It would run at column in a picture, smallest type. Or with a picture of a new baby. I can only tell them the society department will keep open house beginning at 10 a. m.

Other women are desirous of having a picture in the paper of a son who has been made a corporal. We are pleased to do that, but somebody must take notes on his birthday, parentage, school records and which fraternity, if any, had grabbed him off.

The men called on the 'phone. I have never been able to ignore a 'phone. It may mean my wife has fallen down the basement stairs and busted a leg. But usually it is somebody wanting to know the score between Cincinnati and New York on last Thursday a week ago and who were the pitchers. I have been brought up to be just as nice and polite as a 12-year-old at dancing school. And I try to be. But I think that in future, while I serve my term as grand juror, I shall sleep late and report directly to the courthouse at 10 a. m. on Tuesdays and Fridays. I don't seem to accomplish much by hitting my typewriter at 8 a. m.

Met an oldtimer on the bus the other afternoon. His old business had passed out—because he could not get anything to sell in his line—and he's landed a government job. And a pretty good one.

"But it's darn near killed me," he said. "Traveling. It's a traveling job. And I hadn't been on a train since the automobile was invented. Didn't travel then, except week end trips for pleasure."

"Now it's trains—and buses. If you can get on them, I didn't say find a seat or a Pullman berth. I said get on them."

"But I'm promised a shift which will keep me in the office from 9 to 5. No traveling, except to home on a trolley. And when I get home I'm going to take off my shoes and stretch out. If I go outside the city limits in the next 10 years I'll be dragged by a tractor. All the world I want to see is between Garden Hills and Five Points."

Rank Isn't All
Privates in the service are not all drafted from behind the plow or the railroad section gangs.

Heard a story last week of a colonel whose chauffeur—or driver—was a private. The colonel wanted to stop at a barber shop for a haircut.

"May I come in if I can find a parking place?" asked his driver.

"Why?" inquired the colonel. "You look clean shaven and you don't need a haircut."

"I'm two days behind on a manicure, sir," said the private. "And this looks like a good time."

Heredity doesn't always work out. I had a lady dachshund known as the Jeep which had a murderous instinct. She would tackle anything from a mule to a neighbor. She never quite killed a mule, but she plumb ruined a couple of hogs for which I paid. She is now on a North Carolina farm, where I hope she has learned better.

But her son, Ding, is a gentle soul. It has amused me to watch him and our 16 large and friendly hens when they are permitted to scratch outside their own yard. Ding goes among them, brushes against them, apparently tries to swap remarks about the weather with them—all in the best of humor. They don't mind him and he doesn't bother them. Except sometimes, after a dog's nature, he attempts to sniff at their posterior. Which results in an irate squeak and a wild leap. Our hens are ladies.

Suckers are biting well in Upson county—and Fulton, too, though I have no statistics. Here's a quote from the Thomaston Times:

"The Negro women were arrested last week for writing the bug and were released after payment of $150. Robert Bethel, city clerk, reported that when the women paid out, he had to count the money from paper sacks and that counting three hundred dollars in five, ten and twenty-five cent pieces is a real job."

The Hon. Emory Bass, of Valdosta, recently emitted an epigram which should reverberate through the ages along with the sayings of Epictetus and Confucius.

"Don't plant a victory garden bigger than your wife can work," quoth Mr. Bass.

"Hooper Employees Don't Let 175 Pints of Blood to Mobile Unit," says headline in Otis Brumby's estimable Cobb County Times.

But how did the surgeons extract the blood?

COUNTY CHIEFS AND ARNALL—For the first time since 1936, a delegate from Fulton county has been elected president of the Association of County Commissioners of Georgia. Ed L. Almand (left) was elected here yesterday at the one-day war conference, succeeding Judge James P. Houlihan (center), of Chatham county. "Congratulations," says Governor Arnall, who spoke to the conference.

Cut Out All Frills During War, Governor Urges County Chiefs

By ROGER BOND.

Predicting a "long, bloody" war, Governor Arnall yesterday urged the county commissioners of Georgia to cut out "all frills" until the war has been won and then to get together on a postwar program that will put the state at the top of the nation in prosperity and integrity.

Speaking here at the Ansley hotel on a one-day war conference program of the Association of County Commissioners of Georgia, the chief executive said: "The counties and the state governments must cut out all frills and win the war. It's going to be a long, drawn-out, bloody affair. . . and I feel that we should therefore take a pessimistic attitude—not build on false economy."

Almand Elected Chief.
After hearing the Governor, who swapped places on the program with Highway Director Ryburn Clay so that he could address the Florida legislature during the evening, the commissioners elected Ed L. Almand, of Fulton county, as 1944 president, succeeding Judge James P. Houlihan, of Chatham county.

Both the Governor and Clay told the commissioners of a postwar road-building program to recompense the counties for the loss of construction during the war.

Under legislation pending in congress to provide states with funds for road work after the war, Clay said, Georgia would be entitled to about $75,000,000 over a three-year period and would be required to match only one-fourth of that amount.

$3-Million-Dollar Plan.
"This means," asserted Clay in a prepared address, "that Georgia for the first three years after the war would have a program amounting to $3,000,000 a year."

The Governor and highway director pointed out that due to gasoline rationing and the pegging of gasoline tax payments to counties at the prewar rationing level, the highway department has lost about 77 per cent of its revenue, or an estimated $12,200,000 annually.

Governor Arnall said he was not "unpatriotic," but he felt that the counties should be reimbursed by Uncle Sam for losses in gasoline rationing.

"If I was in congress," he declared, "I would be raising hell about the gasoline situation."

The Governor said he intended to co-operate with the federal government, but said at the same time he expected "fair treatment" not only for Georgia but for all states.

Falling Out of Debt.
Asserting that "stealing" in the state government has been replaced by "rigid economy," Governor Arnall said the state debt of $35,000,000 "left by the last administration" had been reduced to $25,000,000 during the first four months of the present administration.

"With a few breaks this administration won't have a penny debt when my four years are up," the Governor said.

Governor Arnall exhorted the commissioners to support the proposed constitutional amendment which would replace the present "crazy quilt of patchwork" state constitution with a modern constitution.

"This is not a move to blot out county governments," he assured the delegates; "if anything it will help the counties. . . and I will tell you now that I believe in the county governments and I know that they need help."

Great Road Program.
In the president's address, Houlihan said "there is no question but that a gigantic highway program will be needed at the close of the war." He urged the appointment of a committee to study various county governments and recommend plans for the future.

"Every county in the state should have a road program," he said.

UMW NOT CIO.
Editor Constitution: The resolution which follows has been passed by the local branch of a CIO union and seeks to correct the false impression created by the publication, "Stars and Stripes." There is no criticism of any local newspaper, or of the United Press. We are loyal workers in a war industry. Hundreds of our members, other than messengers, still work for 30 cents an hour. Hundreds of others are working for from $15 to $19 a week, awaiting a little help from the WLB since last October. But we strenuously object to an Army publication, which serves our men at the front, linking us with a coal strike or John L. Lewis.

"Whereas, the daily papers of Monday, May 3, 1943, carried a United Press story dated Allied Headquarters, North Africa, May 3, 1943, reading: 'The Army publication Stars and Stripes carried the coal strike as its lead story on page one under the heading: 'FDR runs coal pits after CIO walkout,' and

"Whereas, in our opinion, the headline used by Stars and Stripes was uncalled for, unfair and most harmful to the Congress of Industrial Organizations and its affiliates, and

"Whereas, the editors of Stars and Stripes could hardly have been ignorant of the fact that John L. Lewis and the United Mine Workers have no connection whatever with the CIO, and therefore, in our opinion, using the defamatory headline deliberately, be it therefore

"Resolved by the Atlanta local, No. 66, of the American Communications Association, CIO, in regular monthly meeting, that request be made of the Army publication Stars and Stripes for the publication of an apology on the part of the Army newspaper, for their error, and that the explanation be given as much prominence as their misleading headline, in an effort to, as far as possible, compensate for the damage done to the CIO, and be it further

"Resolved, that this local reaffirm its opposition to any kind of strike for the duration of the war, even though we believe the demands of the mine workers to be reasonable and just and urgent, and that we vigorously condemn the attitude and conduct of John L. Lewis toward the government of this United States and the commander-in-chief of its armed forces, and declare ourselves, as a unit of the CIO, to be wholeheartedly behind President Franklin D. Roosevelt as our commander-in-chief, and be it further

"Resolved that this resolution be forwarded to the editors of Stars and Stripes and also to Secretary of War Stimson, to President Roosevelt, to the presidents of the CIO and the American Communications Association, to the daily papers and other persons or organizations concerned in any part of the resolution."

THANKS FROM AWS.
Editor, Constitution: I should like to express my appreciation of the publicity accorded the meeting of Aircraft Warning Service volunteers at Taft hall last Monday evening. The publication of articles in The Constitution did much to stimulate interest in the meeting, and also afforded the public a view of the problem of air defense and the measures being taken in that field. We of the Aircraft Warning Service feel too the Georgians who have volunteered their time and services both in the filter center and as "spotters" in the field are deserving of recognition such as can be given only through the medium of the newspaper.

I realize the problems arising from the short notice given to your paper concerning the meeting, and thank you sincerely for the splendid way in which you helped us.

EVERY MILE A USEFUL MILE

LIFE must go on, somehow. Motor-cars are jacked up. Common carriers are loaded. Yet the need to get around is more vital than ever.

Your business and professional contacts are on the edge of town now. The War Agencies have taken over vast areas of downtown space, and normal services are hard to reach.

Which throws a growing load on diminishing Taxicabs.

You must, therefore, help us conserve our mileage. The ideal would be every mile a useful mile.

We may never reach that ideal, but with co-operation we can approach it. If we know you are going to need a Yellow Cab, we can plan to send someone out your way in the cab that brings you back.

Every mile we wear out needlessly is a mile we cannot deliver to somebody who will really need it next year.

How Atlanta Member Views 'Eight Girls to Every Man' Club

Betty Benefield, 24, Enthusiastic Over New Organization.

By GEORGE FRASER.

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION.
WASHINGTON, May 12.—We got a new slant on this city today after we had caught an advance peek at Columbia's new comedy, "The More the Merrier." In the film Stars Jean Arthur, Joel McCrea and Charles Coburn develop the theory that the chief problem in the nation's capital is not the new tax bill nor the opening of a second front, but rather the plight of the female government employees who find themselves without a sufficient number of men around to provide the romance and companionship which they feel they need.

Back in the office we discovered that an Atlanta girl, 24-year-old Betty Benefield, formerly of 1427 Beecher street, now is working as an assistant supervisor in a Washington war plant. The unique feature about her, so far as we were concerned, was Miss Benefield's membership in a newly organized government girls' club which rejoices in the name of the "Eight-Girls-to-Every-Man" Club. We immediately put in a call to Adams 8430, the number of the room at 2817 Connecticut avenue, which Miss Benefield shares with a friend.

Atlantic Answers.
A couple of minutes later we heard a good, old-fashioned Atlanta voice. "Hello, Miss Benefield speaking." We explained we were interested in hearing about the man-power shortage in Washington, with particular reference to the "Eight-Girls-to-Every-Man" Club, and the specific campaign it planned to alleviate the shortage.

"HELLO" — Betty Benefield, former Atlanta girl, who now is working in a Washington war plant, tells how girls in Washington have got together on the "man-power shortage" in an effort to get more dates.

Miss Benefield's voice took on a new interest. It seems the sole topic of conversation among the couple of thousand girls who already have signed up for membership in the club is their new project, and additional ways of locating eligible young men.

Enthusiastically she explained the "Eight-Girls-to-Every-Man" Club was inspired by a group of government girls who suddenly realized that ever since they had come to Washington they hadn't had any of the dates which they had been accustomed to having back in their home towns.

The girls called a meeting to discuss ways and means; the perfect club name was suggested by newspaper editorials which called public attention to the fact that statistics showed a ratio of eight girls to every man within the Washington city limits.

"The first idea we had," Miss Benefield went on, "was to send a petition to commanding officers of all near-by service camps, asking them to change their leave schedules to permit the men to have staggered leaves, instead of having all leaves on Saturday night.

"By doing this, we'll find a steadier, even if smaller, stream of men coming into town every night, instead of all of them crowding into the city on Saturday night, jamming every night spot and making girls turn down many dates that they would have been very happy to accept any other night in the week.

"Important people were wonderful to us as soon as we had become organized. Newspaper and radio people gave us lots of excellent publicity; society folks opened their houses to members of the club and their servicemen dates for dances and parties; and Columbia Pictures gave us a special party, at which we saw an advance world preview of 'The More the Merrier,' the same picture which you say you've just seen, which first interested you in our problem.

"The idea of the preview was that because all of us are government girls who like to meet nice boys with whom we can dance and have a good time, we'd have a particular lot of fun seeing the first film story which shows our actual problem, and the means that Jean Arthur uses to try to be the one girl in eight who gets the man she wants.

Grand Time at Screening.
"We had a grand time at the screening; each girl was allowed to bring a guest, and many of the girls invited their bosses. We all got a terrific bang out of the fact that top-ranking bureau chiefs and governmental executives—the kind of people who normally would be the first to be invited to any preview or advance screening—could only attend the showing of 'The More the Merrier' as escorts of the girls who spend their days working as filing clerks or stenographers in these men's offices."

Miss Benefield, who received her A. B. in literature and journalism from Oglethorpe University in 1941, originally had planned to follow a career of creative writing. However, with Pearl Harbor came her decision to shelve her own desires in favor of a job more immediately useful to the government's war effort, and after commencement she took the first train north. Her two sisters, Kathryn, 22, and Barbara, 20, are planning to follow her example as soon as they finish their own school careers.

Parents Back Action.
Her father, Frank Benefield, county electrical superintendent, and Mrs. Benefield are emphatic in their approval of Betty's action in going to Washington.

"That makes me very happy," Betty told us earnestly. "Some of us in the 'Eight-Girls-to-Every-Man' Club were a little worried, at first, over what our parents might think when we began to get publicity as a group of girls who were looking for boys to date; but not a single parent has objected.

"They all seemed to have enough confidence in us to know that we're simply trying to work out some method of entertaining both our service men and the girls who are holding down the home front in Washington," Betty laughed.

"After all," she said, "it's logical for me to get an idea and go ahead with it. On my mother's side I'm a direct descendant of Patrick Henry—so I imagine nobody can quarrel with me if I choose, as my own personal motto: 'Give me men friends or give me death!'"

Comedy, Mystery, War, Drama in New Films Here

Comedy, mystery, war and drama are the themes of new photoplays which make their bows on the screens of Atlanta theaters today.

Headlining the new list is the Rialto's "The More the Merrier," a delightful comedy; "Lady of Burlesque," a musical-mystery play, at Loew's beginning today, while the Fox offers "China," a story of the war in the far east. "Desert Victory," story of the British victory in North Africa, plays at the Paramount, and the Capitol offers first-run "Forever and a Day," featuring more than 50 Hollywood players.

Here's the line-up:

Rialto
"The More the Merrier," a satire on crowded housing conditions in Washington, starring Jean Arthur, Joel McCrea and Charles Coburn, opens on the screen of the Rialto theater today.

The comical story revolves around the goings-on in a small apartment. Jean Arthur, a working girl with a sympathetic heart, rents a share of her apartment to Coburn, who in turn shares his half of the flat with McCrea. How the three of them fight over bathroom priorities, and otherwise become involved in screwy situations, provides many a laugh.

Loew's Grand
Adapted from Gypsy Rose Lee's story of backstage life, "Lady of Burlesque," starring Barbara Stanwyck and Michael O'Shea, bows in on the screen of Loew's Grand theater today for a week's engagement.

Filmed against the colorful background of show business, "Lady of Burlesque" tells how the star of a burlesque revue (Miss Stanwyck) becomes involved in two backstage murders. How she, with the aid of a clown, vindicates herself, provides the story with an interesting twist. Several new tunes and many beautiful settings set this picture apart from mere drama. It's a musical-mystery.

Fox
Alan Ladd, the handsome chap who skyrocketed to fame after his appearance in "This Gun for Hire," is seen in his latest toughie role opposite Loretta Young in "China," photoplay which commences on the screen of the Fox theater today.

Miss Young is seen in the part of a school teacher who shepherds a flock of children through war-torn China. Ladd, a devil-may-care truck driver, runs across Miss Young and her young charges and he, along with William Bendix, escorts them to safety, often coming to grips with Jap troops.

Paramount
"Desert Victory," acclaimed as the greatest war film yet released, the actual story of the British Eighth Army's victory over the Africa Corps, will play a limited engagement on the screen of the Paramount theater beginning today. A second feature, "My Friend Flicka," in Technicolor, will be shown along with "Desert Victory."

This war film follows the victorious British Army across the desert from El Alamein to Tripoli. It shows what part the air, mechanized and ground forces played in this great victory for the Allies.

Roddy McDowell is starred in "My Friend Flicka," a story of a youngster and his horse.

Capitol
"Forever and a Day," an ambitious screen venture, featuring more than half a hundred Hollywood personalities, opens on the screen of the Capitol theater today for a week's engagement.

Painted against the highlights of England's growth from Napoleonic days to the present, "Forever and a Day" tells the history of an old English house and of an English family over a long period of years.

Charles Laughton, Merle Oberon, Ida Lupino, Brian Aherne, Claude Rains, Ray Milland, Herbert Marshall and Victor McLaglen are only a few of the players who make up the large cast.

Rhodes
"The Human Comedy," starring Frank Morgan and Mickey Rooney, moves to the Rhodes theater today for a holdover engagement.

This is a story of life in a small American town and how the war affects the lives of the people in the community. Rooney is seen as a messenger who delivers telegrams and Morgan plays the part of an old telegrapher.

'Four Ink Spots' Sing Here Tonight
The Four Ink Spots, nationally known swing quartet, backed up by Lucky Millinder's band, will appear at the Municipal Auditorium tonight during a two-hour floor show and swing festival, the first in a series of summer attractions.

In addition to the Ink Spots, tonight's festival will feature such personalities as Rosetta Tharpe, guitar playing torch singer; Peg Leg Bates, one-legged tap dancer; Trevor Bacon, baritone ballad specialist; Tab Smith, one-man band, and Red and Curley, Broadway dance sensation.

REPORTS FOR DUTY.
ALBANY, Ga., May 12.—Lieutenant Nelson Franklin Tift, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Tift, of Albany, has reported to Brooks Field, Texas, for duty as a student aerial observer, following completion of his course at the Field Artillery Officer Candidate school at Fort Sill, Okla. He is a graduate of the University of Georgia.

NEARER MARTINIQUE
Great Britain has moved troops from Barbados to Dominica, another possession lying between the French islands of Martinique (black areas), Reuters reported Wednesday. The move was linked with the troubled political situation in the French islands.

Police at War Lose on Pensions

Failure of the Georgia legislature to amend city police pension laws will force 91 policemen to serve in armed services without getting credit for the time so served on their pensions, City Attorney Jack C. Savage said yesterday.

All other city employees, including those whose pensions are provided by the general pension funds and the firemen's pension system, will be given credit for the time they serve.

Savage explained that the police pension law is a general enactment of the assembly having local application, while other pension systems were created by amendments to the city charter. In 1941 a charter amendment provided that all city workers entering the services would be credited for the time they served on their pensions. Savage, however, has ruled that a charter amendment would not be sufficient to amend a general law of local application, and therefore, policemen cannot be given credit for the time they serve.

U. S. To Make Loans On War-Affected Income Properties

WASHINGTON, May 12.—(AP)—Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones announced today the government will make loans on private business properties which have lost their earning power because of wartime restrictions and regulations, to help pay taxes, insurance, interest charges and maintenance costs.

The loans, Jones said, will be made by RFC Mortgage Company and will be for the duration of the national emergency.

They will carry 4 per cent interest and will be made against "improved real estate with an established net earning capacity, including stores, privately owned gasoline and service stations, resort hotels and business properties generally."

Jones said the RFC Mortgage Company will consider applications for three classes of loans: Participation loans, refunding loans in which the mortgage company will make a loan to refund all or any portion of existing lien indebtedness where a loan cannot be obtained from private sources, and care and preservation loans, the latter will be made on properties that are unencumbered.

In the case of participation and refunding loans, properties must not have a total lien indebtedness in excess of 60 per cent of the normal value nor in excess of 75 per cent of normal value including the RFC Mortgage Company advances.

Drive on Japs Seen in Talks At Washington

between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill at this time.

The Allied situation with regard to the Pacific war has, however, been fundamentally altered by the victory in Africa and the imminent reopening of the Mediterranean sea route from Britain and America to the Middle East and India.

It means the saving of 5,000 miles in the journey from American ports to India, and is the equivalent of adding millions of tons of shipping to the Allied merchant fleet. It may mean that the British and American leaders feel free now to launch campaigns against the Japanese which have been withheld heretofore for lack of shipping to supply them.

Reopening of Drive.
One such campaign might be the reopening of the Burma road, which, until closed by the Japanese, was a supply line for the Chinese. If this were intended, major operations might be delayed until late summer or fall and the end of the period of monsoons, or heavy rains, in Burma.

Meantime, there might be stepped up air operations throughout the whole Pacific theater. Suggesting that this already is being done are recent dispatches from China disclosing addition of heavy bombers to Chennault's command.

Other Leaders.
In addition to the British military leaders in India, those accompanying General Sir Alan Brooke, chief of the imperial general staff; admiral of the fleet Sir Dudley Pound, the first sea lord; Air Chief Marshal Sir Charles Portal, chief of the air staff; Lord Leathers, minister of war transport; Lord Cherwell, the prime minister's statistical officer; Lieutenant General Sir Hastings L. Ismay, chief staff officer to Mr. Churchill, and Brigadier E. I. C. Jacob, of the war cabinet.

Also here, although not as a member of the official party, is Lord Beaverbrook, London publisher, former minister of supply, and an adviser to the prime minister on production matters.

Stephen Early, presidential secretary, said the talks between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill and between the British military men and their American counterparts would be almost constant.

Mackenzie King

To Take Part in Talks

OTTAWA, May 12.—(AP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King today told the house of commons he would be in Washington next week to participate in the conferences between Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt. King said he had been advised today by the British prime minister that he would not be able to come to Ottawa.

Presages 2d Front, Moscow Reaction

MOSCOW, May 12.—(AP)—Russians interviewed after the announcement of British Prime Minister Churchill's trip to Washington said today they interpreted it in only one way—as presaging a second front.

GM War Production

Loan Is Cut in Half

NEW YORK, May 12.—(AP)—Financial circles heard today the General Motors Corporation had paid half of a $100,000,000 loan negotiated last year under the $1,000,000,000 bank credit "V" loan arranged with some 400 banks throughout the country to finance its war production.

Payment of half the loan indicated, according to banking quarters, the corporation had accumulated a considerable amount of money in excess of working capital requirements.

Tea and Luncheon Feature Convention Social Program

A beautiful event of yesterday was the tea at which Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Selman entertained at the Academy of Medicine on West Peachtree street, the affair honoring the members of the Medical Association of Georgia and its Woman's Auxiliary, both of which are in convention here this week. Dr. Selman is president-elect of the association.

Dr. and Mrs. Selman received their guests in the spacious reception room before a bank of palms and summer garden flowers. Receiving with them were Dr. and Mrs. J. Edgar Paulin, Dr. and Mrs. C. W. Roberts, Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Redfern, of Albany; Dr. and Mrs. J. Lon King, of Macon; Dr. and Mrs. George W. Fuller and Dr. and Mrs. Edgar Hill Greene.

The spacious academy was beautifully decorated for the occasion with a profusion of pastel-shaded summer garden flowers. The tea table, which was centered with a plateau of mixed blossoms, was overlaid with a handsome point de Venise cloth. Mrs. Olin S. Coffey and Mrs. O. H. Matthews poured coffee, and assisting in the entertainment of the guests were members of the entertainment committee of the Woman's Auxiliary to the Fulton County Medical Society.

Another delightful affair of yesterday was the luncheon at which the Woman's Auxiliary to the Fulton County Medical Society entertained the visiting Auxiliary members at the Biltmore hotel. The luncheon tables were arranged on the terrace, with Mrs. J. Lon King, of Macon, state president, and Mrs. Edgar Hill Greene, Fulton county president, and their officers seated at one long table, and the other guests at smaller tables. The speakers' table was centered with a handsome oblong arrangement of pastel-shaded snapdragons, larkspur, peonies and iris, and attractive place cards marked the guests' places. The smaller tables were adorned with garden flowers, also in pastel shades.

The final session of the Medical Auxiliary convention will be held today at 9:30 a. m. at the Academy of Medicine, with Mrs. King presiding. Officers for the ensuing year will be elected and installed, and various awards for excellent Auxiliary work presented.

Art Auction at University Boosts Sale of War Bonds

170 Items Sold to Strictly Business By McFeatters

Highest Bidders in Chapel

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. ATHENS, Ga., May 12.—Sounding the familiar auctioneer's chant, Lamar Dodd, head of the University of Georgia Art Department; Alonzo Lansford, director of the Telfair Academy, Savannah, and Edith Hodgson, assistant in the Art Department, sold $6,818.85 worth of bonds and stamps at the Art Students League "Art for Bonds" auction Tuesday evening in the University chapel.

To the purchaser of the highest bond sold, C. A. Trussell, who pledged to buy $5,600 worth of bonds, went the preliminary sketch of John Stuart Curry's "Migration Westward," a portion of his mural in the Department of Justice building, Washington, D. C. Trussell retains ownership of the bonds.

Lamar Dodd's "Cala Lilies," a gouache, brought the highest individual cash sale at $75. Other productions, both paintings and ceramics, ranged in price, beginning at $1.

During the auction, a cup to the art student rendering "to the art department and his fellow workers the most unselfish service" was presented Olen Williams, of Birmingham. This selection is made annually by the faculty and students in the Art Department.

Approximately 170 pieces of art were sold. Prominent among contributors limited to Athens artists, and faculty and student members, were Lamar Dodd, Jean Charlot, Eugene Payor, Mrs. Mary Case, Miss Annie Mae Holliday, Miss Mildred Ledford and Miss Edith Hodgson, as well as numerous student artists.

Bidding was well distributed among the chapel filled audience and competition was keen and continuous. Numerous bids were entered by Athenians, students and out-of-town visitors anxious to secure works of art not usually available to the public. All types of works, oils, water colors, ceramics and textiles sold quickly.

After the auctioning of works available to the general public, Edith Hodgson, assisted by Mrs. Case, conducted a special auction open to students only.

Dean Paul W. Chapman, chairman of the Clark County War Savings Committee, opened the auction with words of commendation from the local, state and national savings staffs. He announced that national recognition is being accorded the auction in The Minute-man, publication of the Treasury Department.

The entire proceeds from the auction, $12,188.85, will be invested in bonds which will be held by the Art Department until maturity. They will be used to further art education by the formation of an art student scholarship foundation. Lelia Cheney, of Washington, is president of the Art Students' League.

While Their Wives Are Away Lonely Husbands Will Play

By SALLY FORTH.

WHEN THAT GROUP of good friends, Rachael (Mrs. John) Westmoreland, Amelia (Mrs. Neal) Conrad, Callie (Mrs. William Jr.) Healey, Irene (Mrs. Green) Warren, Catherine (Mrs. William) Warren, and Jennie (Mrs. Allison) Thornwell, departed last week for New York, they left behind a sextet of lonesome and self-styled "neglected" husbands. You see, the girls were in great need of a change of scene and a rest from their strenuous schedule of war work. Besides, they wanted to attend some of the meetings of the National Junior League conference which dealt mostly with the League's participation in the war effort. Which explains their wholesale exodus.

The husbands they left behind were pretty droopy after their train pulled out. But not for long! You see, they began to do something about their lonesome state. This evening, for instance, John Westmoreland has planned a party for the entire group at the Thursday evening supper-dance at the Driving Club, and Sally hears there have been other gatherings to keep them from getting TOO depressed. Completing John's party will be his lovely young daughter, Kate (Mrs. Carl) Lockett; Adgate (Mrs. Walker) Hill, of St. Louis; General and Mrs. Clark Howell, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene McNeill, of Marietta, and Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Ellis III.

Another party planned for the Driving Club's buffet supper is that at which Dr. and Mrs. J. Elliott Scarborough will entertain in compliment to Dr. and Mrs. Robert Brown, of Brunswick, who are here to attend the convention of the Georgia Medical Society. The friendship of the Browns and the Scarboroughs began, it seems, in New York City when Dr. Brown and Dr. Scarborough served on the staff of the same hospital.

WHEN the cup, offered by Mrs. James N. Browner to the Medical Auxiliary doing the best work of the year, was awarded at the annual convention of the Georgia Medical Society yesterday, it went for the third time to the Woman's Auxiliary to the Baldwin County Medical Society at Milledgeville. Which is something of a record when you consider that the cup has only been awarded five times!

Fulton and Richmond counties tied for second place in the competition, and Ware county came third.

THE Roosevelt hotel in New York City will prove the rendezvous on Friday for members of the DeSales Harrison family. Lieutenant Commander DeSales Harrison will journey to the metropolis from Quonset Point, Rhode Island, where he is on duty with the United States Navy, and will be accompanied by Mrs. Harrison, who has been at Quonset Point several weeks.

Lieutenant DeSales Harrison Jr., U. S. Army, who is stationed at Fort Sill, Okla., will meet his parents at this well-known hotel, where he will spend his leave. Virginia Harrison entrains this evening for New York to join the family party and the foursome expect to have a royal good time together at their reunion.

WHEN the members of the Girls' Battalion go together for the monthly dance on Tuesday evening at the Georgian Terrace, they elected Laura Shallenberger as their captain for the coming year. Laura succeeds Peggy Dutton, who has been the capable captain since the organization of the battalion a year ago, and who will continue to serve the group as Laura's co-captain.

The dances for officers of the armed forces sponsored monthly by the battalion have become so popular that a request has been made to hold them more often. Hence a dance will be given every Tuesday evening at the Terrace. An officers' uniform will admit him to these affairs, the feminine guest list being limited to the members of the Girls' Battalion.

Robb Watches 500-Pounders Fall Only 150 Yards Away

By INEZ ROBB

(This is the fourth article in a series by Inez Robb about her experiences as a woman war correspondent on the North African front from which she has just returned.)

When air raid sirens split the night over Allied force headquarters, I used to groan and remind myself that cleanliness is next to godliness and Americans next to fanatics in their determination to be clean.

This is not the non-secularist it seems. For the local "Waldorf-Astoria" in which most of the American correspondents were housed when in Allied force headquarters was in the primary target area. Two apartment houses directly across the street from the hotel were already gutted by direct bomb hits which had also succeeded in taking all the windows out of the west side of the hotel.

But the W.-A. was the only hotel in town that boasted hot water daily—even if for but two hours. All of us fought like tigers to remain there whenever a sudden wave of generals or admirals threatened to rain us right out of our home on "Bomb Bay."

Refuses To Leave Hotel.
Nothing could persuade even me to budge from the hotel after that memorable night when an Axis raider dropped a 500-pound bomb only 150 yards away. Even as the hotel and I rocked on our respective foundations and as plaster and glass covered my bed, I remembered that daily bath.

"At least I'll die clean!" I muttered grimly as I reached for my shoes and tin hat that night and started down the stairs to join my masculine confreres.

We would crowd into the room shared by Fred Panton of Readers Digest and the Chicago Times' Jim Wellard. Or we would all descend upon the New York Times' Drew Middleton, or we would confer our company on Lieutenant Colonel Egbert White of Tuckahoe, N. Y.

Sitting in Semi-Darkness.
Someone would produce the stab of a candle (all hotel lights were turned off automatically when the air alarm sounded) and we would sit around in the semi-dark and settle low affairs.

In any well-regulated film, war correspondents sit around under such circumstances with endless Scotchies-and-sodas in their hands. But we took our air raids straight for the simple reason that the North African campaign is, undoubtedly, the driest campaign ever fought in history. There is literally no hard liquor in Africa for buck private, brigades or correspondents.

There is plenty of native wine, but Americans are not wine drinkers.

Sleeps in Coveralls.
On these night sorties, I bore no resemblance whatsoever to any esquire or pin-up girl living or dead. After my first air raid on Bomb Bay, I abandoned both nightgowns and vanity. From then or I slept in my red woolen underwear topped by the olive drab coveralls with which the army supplies both its men and women soldiers.

I always tucked a flashlight, a candle and my passport folder with identification papers and money under my pillow.

Then I put my shoes by the side of the bed where I could reach them in a split second. I always hung my coat in the small foyer that lead into my room, so I could grab it on my way out. Underneath the coat, I put my tin hat so it would be handy, too. When the nights grew very cold, I added an army blanket to this equipment. It took me not more than ten seconds to grab up all these things and be on my way when conditions warranted.

Pilots Want Shelter.
All of us noticed that invariably on the way down to the shelter, we were lapped on the stairs (naturally, with the electricity off, the elevators were defunct) by any and all members of the air corps who happened to be billeted in the hotel.

A good many of these men were pilots who had repeatedly flown over enemy targets both in Europe and Africa. When we would ask them—teasingly—why they always headed for the shelter, they would look at us pityingly and through tight lips invariably say: "We know what a bomb can do."

But when Fred Panton discovered that the hotel shelter was only a negligible number of feet under the surface of the street and would be no more immune to a direct hit than the hotel itself, we all stopped going there and started once more to congregate in each other's rooms.

I have always thought men were wonderful. But I discovered that during an air raid they were indispensable. Just to be with some of the newspaper men with whom I had worked off and on for years made the night less ominous. Unlike Garbo, I had not hankering alone when the bombs began to fall.

Admit Mistake, Try to Mend Situation

By Dixie George

Dear Dixie:
Is there any possible chance for a fellow to win back a girl who has sworn that she would never love him again? Here's the story. When I was married to the most beautiful girl in the world, I honestly thought that we'd never part. I wasn't making much money, and debts were still increasing to a point where something had to be done. I made the suggestion that my wife take our infant son and go to her mother's, and I would go to a cheap hotel until we could get some of our bills paid up. Instead of helping me, she continued to make purchases, and I even helped her select clothes, because I wanted her to be happy. We quarreled, but I had no idea that our quarrels weren't common to all young couples. I asked her to leave a watch for me at the jeweler's to be repaired and she refused. This made me very angry and I blew up telling her that I was through with her. Of course I never meant this. I hoped (conceded as I was) that she would call me, and tell me that she was sorry she had refused my request for a favor, but instead, she entered suit for divorce, on grounds of mental cruelty. I had all accounts closed at once, and entered a counter suit for divorce. Since then I have been half crazy. I guess I still love her. My employer, seeing my run-down condition, transferred me to a western city where I would have a chance to forget my misfortune. I believe that my wife could be persuaded to drop her suit for divorce and come to me, away from her parents and mine, and give our marriage another trial to keep the home together, and have a beautiful life once again for the baby's sake. What can you suggest?

SAM:
I would suggest that you drop your counter suit and try to reason with your wife and beg her to come back to you, since you seem to love her so much. I think that both of you started on the wrong foot and there was no co-operation. If there had been, there would have been no misunderstanding. I would suggest that you try to get her to come out where you are and start over, but make it understood that finances are important and that you must have co-operation from her. At the same time try to curb your temper and don't fly off the handle at some childish thing as you have done. It takes a big person and a lot of courage to say: "I'm sorry" and to admit one's mistakes. If you love her, I think that you could persuade her to come back to you, for after all don't you think that her pride would be hurt after you told her in no uncertain words that you were through with her? That was hard for her to take, and I can't blame her for walking out on you, for she had no other alternative. It's your move now, and if you still love her it's up to you to use every means of winning her back.

Exercise Builds Abdominal Muscles, Improves Health

By Ida Jean Kain

A wandering waistline gives you a middle-aged figure and it is no help to your health either to have a waist that measures a mere four to five inches less than the bust. The front muscles are the weakest in the entire waistline group. They take on fat first and that is the place to start trimming—in the middle. Of course, you hope you will lose there as you reduce your weight. But it is of the utmost importance, to strengthen these muscles as otherwise, with loss of weight, the organs will tend to sag and crowd against each other. Then, even though you have lost weight, you will look middle-aged, and feel it.

For a beginning exercise, simply pull up and in, starting with the lower abdominal muscles and continuing the upward pull of the muscles until the small of the back is pressed flat against the floor. Hold, then slowly release. Repeat, rhythmically, 10 times.

Do the same exercise with a fairly heavy book placed on the abdomen. Raise the book by pushing up with the abdominal muscles, and lower it by pulling up and in with the muscles. Perform the exercise slowly and accurately. Continue for six counts, rest, and repeat another six times. Later you can perform the exercise as many as 40 counts, resting after each 10.

From the position—lying on back on floor, knees flexed and soles of feet on floor—bring one knee up to chest. Do this easily at first, then a bit more forcefully, until the flexion of the knee raises the hip slightly off the floor. Start with five counts, alternating knees after five counts, and gradually increasing to 20 counts.

Roll over on the side, and from that position bring one knee up toward the chest as the other leg is thrust straight down.

All these exercises are extremely effective. They will help to tone the muscles of the abdominal wall and to improve health and figure.

Former Hollywood Playground Is Taken For Wounded Soldiers

By Sheila Graham

HOLLYWOOD, May 12.—From 42-year-old Nelson Eddy to 17-year-old Donald O'Connor is the current love experience of 18-year-old Susanna Foster. She had Nelson in "Phantom of the Opera." She gets Don in "Angela." Master Don is looking forward to the assignment with relish. I gather from his conversation that he will not imitate Mr. Eddy. "I shall model myself on John Barrymore," he tells me. "Tr me, Mr. Barrymore was the greatest lover and the greatest actor of all time. What a profile!"

Don, a member of the vaudeville act, "The O'Connor Family," was carried onto the stage in his mother's arms at the age of six. He has been "going with" Gloria Jean on and off during the past year. Right now it's off. But it was very much on when Gloria was working with Alan Curtis in Charles Boyer's "For All We Know." Alan had just broken his marriage with Ilona Massey and Don was afraid he would turn to Gloria on the rebound. So he went to Boyer and asked: "What sort of guy is this Curtis? Is he a wolf? Can he be trusted?" But time heals everything. Don is now dreaming of one day making a picture with Shirley Temple, whom he describes "As the most beautiful woman in the world!" Time marches on.

Walter Pidgeon chews from morning until night on the set of "Madame Curie." "What is it," Director Mervyn LeRoy asked him. "Dulse," replied Pidgeon. "It's something you chew in Canada." LeRoy and several others asked for some, chewed, and had to leave the set hurriedly. "Dulse" is like seaweed, and needs definitely an acquired taste. Maria Montez is having two cobra bites painted on her wrist for a scene in "Cobra Woman." Maria is playing twins, one is a good girl, one is bad. "I like to play the good girl best," says Maria. "I thought it would be difficult, but it is easy for me." Maria has just had an argument with the director. "He wants me to say 'everything' instead of 'everything.' It took me a long time to learn to say 'everything,' and that's what I want to say," she says. "Everything," makes me sound quaint. But Bergman, she is not quaint. And I wish to be like Bergman!

I went to Palm Springs last week end, and it was interesting to see how the former playground for Hollywood has been taken over by fighting units and wounded soldiers. I only saw four or five movie people in the place. There was Sir Cedric Hardwicke with his nine-year-old son, Edward, who fractured his skull running head-on into an iron bar. And Robert Young was there with his children. Also Shirley Temple with her ma and pa. And Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland. Mickey and Judy were on hand before the arrival of the "Girl Crazy" company. "We're supposed to get a nice, even tan in place of make-up," Judy explained. New-comer Robert Walker took top honors at the preview of "Bataan." The boy, husband of Jennifer (Bernadette) Jones, is six feet two, weighs 130 pounds, is minus hips—practically—and his appeal, as noticed by the middle-aged women in the audience, "He's so like my son."

Claudette Colbert, in the opinion of Mark Sandrich, director of her recent film, "So Proudly We Hail," is the type of woman who never grows old. "She is too vital in her personal life," says Mark. He adds that this is one reason why women today look much younger than did their grandparents. . . . Joseph Cotten and his wife can be found at any and every auction sale. They are not searching for antiques. They are looking for a washing machine!

MY DAY: Sees Film From Turkey

By Eleanor Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, Tuesday.—Last evening Mr. Thomas Whittemore came with Mr. Robert Woods Bliss to show us a film depicting the results of the work he has been doing on the Church of St. Sophia, in Turkey. The mosaics are the most beautiful color I have ever seen. One marvels at the patience and the beauty which were created so many years ago.

At my press conference yesterday morning, representatives from the Department of Agriculture came to talk about the mobilization of women for work on farms. Miss Florence Hall, from the extension service, has been appointed head of this work. She brought Miss Margaret Smith to model the work clothes, which are not obligatory but which are being suggested for work on the farm. The program is to be completely decentralized so that every state will do its own recruiting. They hope to set some standards for training, and also for the conditions under which women will work.

In Great Britain, of course, the women in the land army have many of the same benefits that the women in the factories have. They are included under social security and receive sickness insurance, pension and unemployment benefits.

We are dividing our program into full-time, year-round workers and seasonal workers. The seasonal workers have to agree to do one month's work, and there is a requirement that the women must be at least 18 years old. No ceiling on age has been set, so this may be a field in which some women over 45 may find useful employment.

Women are being asked if they will not only perform the work for which they have been especially trained, but if they will help out in the house, for many regular farm women feel that they are better equipped to work in the fields than some of the people who are trained for a short time. If they could be relieved of housework, they could do a great deal more out of doors.

Connecticut is running an all-year-round, two-week course for would-be farm workers, and I imagine every state will gradually do something similar. Two of the training courses found most useful are those for women who wish to replace dairy and poultry men.

The Victory Corps High School group, which is also being recruited, will be in a different way than this women's land army. They will go out in groups during the summer and be under supervision, probably living in camps or in some central place.

Amazing way to boost Vitality improve your Looks!

1—Promote the flow of vital digestive juices in the stomach

2—Energize your body with RICH, RED BLOOD!

THESE two important steps may help you to overcome Sour Stomach, Jerky Nerves, Loss of Appetite, Underweight, Digestive Complaints, Weakness, Poor Complexion.

Improper diet, overwork, undue worries, colds, the flu or other illness often impairs the stomach's digestive functions and reduces the red-blood strength.

A person who is operating on only 70 to 75% healthy blood volume or a stomach digestive capacity of only 50 to 60% normal is severely handicapped. At such times Nature needs extra help to restore its proper functions and balance. Undigested food places a tax on the system. Insufficient blood strength is a detriment to good health.

If you are subject to poor digestion or suspect deficient red-blood as the cause of your trouble, yet have no organic complication or focal infection, SSS Tonic may be just what you need.

SSS Tonic is especially designed to build-up blood strength when deficient and to promote those stomach juices which digest the food so your body can make proper use of it in rebuilding worn-out tissue.

These two important results enable you to enjoy the food you do eat . . . to make use of it as Nature intended. Thus you may get new vitality . . . you become animated . . . more attractive!

Only Snag in African Mop-Up Is Put Up By Duce's 'Cowards'

WASHINGTON, May 12.—(P)—Trapped in the hills of Tunisia, an Italian army for several days tried to polish up the badly tarnished reputation of Il Duce's unwarlike legions.

While the vaunted might of famous German divisions collapsed before the Allied attacks like a house of cards in a high wind, the Italians under General Giovanni Messe elected to fight it out.

Long after most of the other Axis warriors threw in the sponge, they defied the French forces and the British Eighth Army in a hopeless struggle in the mountains southwest of the base of the Cap Bon peninsula.

Since any soldier worth his salt would rather whip a tough foe than win an easy victory over an enemy who won't stop running long enough to shoot back, the Italian stand in Tunisia found military men here evincing a kind of paradoxical pleasure that the only real snag struck by the Allies in the Tunisian mop-up should be the defiant Italian Army.

And since the Germans as well as the Allies have poked fun at the Italian soldiery for its lack of stomach for a fight, Rome probably found considerable solace in the announcement recently that General Messe had "spurned" an Allied demand that he surrender. Whether he was still holding out tonight was not known here, but it was certain that he would soon be overwhelmed. Some German forces shared his fight for a while.

Convoy Escort Repels 25 Subs In 8-Day Fight

British Conflict Hailed As Greatest Success Against U-Boat.

LONDON, May 12.—(P)—Allied escort ships and planes fighting a fierce, eight-day running battle against a pack of as many as 25 Axis submarines attacking an Atlantic convoy recently sank four and perhaps 10 of the U-boats, the admiralty announced today.

It was the greatest success against submarines thus far reported by the admiralty. The battle took place intermittently for eight days and nights late in April and early in May.

The "convoy suffered some damage but the majority of the merchantmen reached port in safety," the communiqué declared.

On April 30, the admiralty said, eight U-boats were concentrated against the convoy, but a series of attacks was repulsed. A gale blew up May 1, lasting three days. But when the weather improved, more U-boats joined the hunt and "during the fourth, fifth and sixth of May it is estimated that our escorts were in action with a pack of some 25 U-boats."

But—Sacrificing Non-Essential Calls Helps Clear Lines for Vital War Calls

You bet it's pleasant to talk with friends over the telephone, just as it was pleasant to take those long Sunday afternoon rides when we had plenty of tires and gasoline.

But social calls must be handled over the same local telephone facilities as war calls. There is a definite limit to the number of calls these facilities can handle at the same time, and when more calls are made, some must wait.

With telephone equipment already burdened with war calls, non-essential calls may delay necessary calls, so we are requesting your voluntary cooperation to reduce unnecessary calling.

Under normal conditions we would expand our facilities to care for the increased volume of calls, but we cannot do that now because the needed materials are going into war weapons.

So won't you help by making fewer local calls? And when you must make a call, won't you please try to make it as short as possible?

Mussolini Changes From 'I' to 'We'

There was something pathetic in Mussolini's last squawk from that balcony in Rome. When a dictator switches from the personal pronoun to the plural he is deadlier than a planked shad.

It is a reminder of what Emmanuel said when asked his opinion of Benito's Ethiopian invasion. "If Mussolini wins I shall be King of Italy and Ethiopia. If he loses I shall be King of Italy again."

Well, it comes up snake-eyes for Benito. But he toddles out onto the balcony and said, "We have the African illness."

That isn't all. He still has a relapse coming on our fever chart.

Veterans of World War I Look to Future

Harvey W. Seeds, American Legion Post No. 28 of Miami, Fla., is an earnest supporter of my suggestion that national legislation be enacted now making provision for the veterans of this war. It endorses by idea to grant a year's base pay to every man discharged that he may have the opportunity of readjusting himself to civil life and without having to worry.

As a result of a resolution passed by this post, Lex Green, member of congress from Florida, has introduced a bill in the house of representatives providing for the continuance of pay for a year and permitting those who so desire to remain in the service a year after cessation of hostilities.

This bill has been referred to the Committee on Military Affairs. J. Hardin Peterson, another congressman from Florida, has endorsed the views expressed in the Legion resolution and promised to support the necessary legislation, and at the Florida state convention of the legion to be held in Jacksonville May 12-14, an effort will be made by Harvey W. Seeds Post to get unanimous department endorsement.

It will also endeavor to get the subject placed before each succeeding state department as they convene prior to the legion's national convention. It is my opinion the powerful support of the legion as a whole would make the proposed legislation a cinch, though otherwise the veterans of World War I might have to wait years to accomplish the same thing. They would have to wait as did the Legionnaires to perfect an organization, a war of strength sufficient to impress the statesmen in Washington.

I am quoting the Harvey W. Seeds Post resolution here in full because it expresses the sad experience of the veterans of World War I who realized the emptiness of the promises made them and the hopes of the future held out for them when the bands were playing and the streets were resounding to the cheers of the non-participants in the war. A large number of these veterans were sleeping on park benches just a few months after the war and the civilians who had cheered them came to resent their very presence.

Here is the resolution: "Many members of the American Legion will remember the years of 1919 and 1920 and the hardships suffered in those years by many veterans of World War I; and whereas, "Those veterans, on returning to civilian status, discovered with dismay that the plaudits of 1917-18 and the lavish promises of what a grateful nation and grateful employers would do 'when you got back' were but empty phrases, and a veteran's honorable discharge, in all too many cases, was a handicap to getting a decent job, at living wages; and whereas, "Economic and industrial dislocations in 1917-19 were not on so vast and universal a scale as they have become since December 7, 1941, and will undoubtedly continue for some months after the cessation of the present hostilities; and whereas,

"Veterans from World War II will face far more serious problems of rehabilitation than did we in 1919-20; and whereas, "Measures should be taken now to provide against recurrence of the conditions of 1918-19-20 and to protect veterans of World War II from the unhappy, degrading experiences of the veterans of World War I, which were nothing short of a national disgrace; therefore,

"Be it resolved, that the Congress of the United States should prepare and enact legislation that will provide for gradual discharge of men from the armed services, releasing first those men actually known to have jobs or businesses waiting, and, in any event, to grant a year's base pay to every man discharged, such base pay to be paid in the regular manner which prevailed in wartime; and

"Be it further resolved, that the Department of Florida, at the Jacksonville, 1943, convention, adopts similar resolution urging action along this line by the 1943 national convention; that copies of this resolution be sent to all Florida representatives in congress and a copy be spread on the minutes of this meeting.

"Adopted at regular meeting, April 2, 1943, at Miami, Fla." HARVEY W. SEEDS POST NO. 28 AMERICAN LEGION, W. S. McFARLAND, Adjutant. LYNN M. SHAW, Chairman. Resolutions Committee. NORTON R. GRANGER, Commander.

Don't Be Hasty

It's a bit early to take the bet that reportedly is being made in Dixie football circles. To wit: That only two or three Southeastern Conference schools will play intercollegiate football in the fall.

Georgia isn't listed among the schools figured likely to play.

But it's no good bet that Georgia won't be among those that play a regular schedule.

Georgia is going ahead with plans to play, using 17-year-olds and other students who can make the grade. Alabama, with a great football background, is not figuring on giving up without a struggle.

There are, in fact, at least six schools that will continue to play if it is at all within the realms of possibility. Count L. S. U. in this group.

Two definitely are going to play and with no equivocations involved. These two are Georgia Tech and Tulane. They have naval units and reasonably expect to recruit a number of boys who know their way around in football. They will fill in with whatever other players are left.

As far as Southeastern Conference plans, as a whole, are concerned, there is a strong possibility that something of a definite nature will come out of the annual conference track meet at Birmingham this week.

All the coaches plan to be there and football will be possibly a more absorbing subject than track.

Some of the schools may make a definite decision then. On the other hand, they may continue a "wait and see" policy. This is the most logical step.

Defeatist Attitude

Lawrence Perry was writing on the subject of hasty action the other day. He declared that Harvard's decision to drop intercollegiate football for the duration of the war was viewed as ill-advised, coming at this time.

It was pointed out, with logic, that while a defeatist view can logically be taken, so also, in view of lack of knowledge as to what lies ahead, may optimism be adopted.

"Scheduled games," said one prominent authority, "can be cancelled as late as a Friday night before the agreed-on Saturday event. So why jump through a barrier before it is lowered? It may well be—as I think will be the case—that intercollegiate sport, perhaps modified, can be carried on. At any rate, as I see it, no university should take action before September 1 next, when the outlook will be much more clearly defined than it is at the present time. Then, it may turn out that defeatist action was not necessary."

Only Harvard, of the really large universities, has declared it cannot go on.

Florida's decision was expected. The fighting Gators are virtually stuck off on a spur line and found it inadvisable to attempt to buck the many obstacles confronting the intercollegiate program.

But it is altogether different with such a school as Harvard. This blue-blooded institution has set a bad example. Harvard has a naval unit and enough other students to continue the football program.

Many schools in the east have no idea at all concerning the status of college sports in the forthcoming months.

But they are not adopting the defeatist attitude of Harvard and folding up. They're willing to wait and see what the future will bring.

A Poor Excuse

One of Harvard's odd excuses for giving up football, and along with it a proud athletic tradition, was overtaxed athletic facilities.

If this were a good excuse, Coach Bill Alexander would have called everything off a long time ago at Georgia Tech. Tech is taking care of 1,000 Army cadets and beginning in July will provide facilities for 1,000 additional Navy cadets. Everything is progressing nicely. The Tech coaches are handling the physical program and carrying on the regular spring athletic schedule for the regular students.

Over at Georgia facilities are taxed to the limit.

278 Dogs Vie for Honors at Decatur Today

Judging Starts At 10 O'Clock This Morning

Servicemen To Exhibit War Dogs in Afternoon, Evening.

By RUTH STANTON COGILL.

The Atlanta Kennel Club all-breed dog show swings into action this morning at the Decatur High school auditorium with 278 of dogdom's finest competing for honors. Today marks the 31st consecutive year that Atlanta has been host to famous dogs from far and near. Entries represent over half the states, and many contestants are seasoned troopers from abroad. They have been imported by American kennels for their outstanding blood lines and show accomplishments. So it will be a gala day in the bench show world, and every dog, from the tiniest Chihuahua to the biggest Dane will be groomed to perfection, every hair in place, and aristocratic canine feet tipping or shuffling.

Judging will get under way promptly at 10 a. m. There will be two rings to keep the judging at top speed until the evening climax, when both rings will be turned into one large arena to make way for the variety groups, best American-bred and best dog in show. Two prominent judges, Virgil D. Johnson, of Savannah, and Forest N. Hall, of Dallas, Texas, are handling the assignments. Because of the all-out effort of the club to secure funds and donate all proceeds to Dogs for Defense, both judges are contributing their services.

Admission to the show will be 50 cents for adults and 25 cents for children and all men and women in uniform.

An added attraction of this year's event, one that goes hand in hand with the Dogs for Defense program, will be the exhibition of war dogs presented both in the afternoon and evening by service men.

Judging program:

Black Panther Holds No Fear For Etchinson

Ronnie Etchinson got a laugh out of the masked Black Panther referring to him as a "minor." The Panther had suggested Promoter Sammy Friedman could do better in the way of an opponent for him Friday night.

"I'll give the masked man something to think about," Etchinson said. "I may not think he's in the ring with a child before the match is over Friday night."

Etchinson, a handsomely built young wrestler who has established a reputation as a comer, is one of a long list of wrestlers Promoter Friedman has sent against the masked Panther at the city auditorium.

And up to now the Panther has not lost his mask. He has beaten all opposition, including Roland Kirchmeyer. And he has shown no signs of weakening.

The youth and agility of Etchinson may unmask the Panther, but the fans doubt it will happen. The masked man has plainly shown he can handle himself in any company. His latest victim was Emeier Badui.

Dorve Roche and Ralph Garibaldi are appearing in the semi-main event, while Rudy Strongberg and George Pavach will open the show at 8:30.

Tickets are on sale at popular prices at Piedmont Hatters.

Smithies Win Cinch Baseball Title for 1943

Tech High's Smithies cinched the city prep baseball championship yesterday afternoon by scoring a decisive 13-to-1 victory over Commercial, only member of the Big Four to win from Coach Allen's nine this season.

Tech High will clash with Boys' High this afternoon, but the outcome makes no difference in the championship because the Purples have already lost three times.

Jim Garner pitched and batted the Smithies to victory over Commercial. He held the Typists to four hits and batted out two himself in as many trips.

Buck Terry, Gantt and Edwards all got two hits out of four attempts for the victors, while Walker did the same for Commercial.

The score: Commercial 000 000 001—1 4 4 Tech High 053 000 05x—13 12 1 Joiner, Walker and Haddad; Garner and Gantt.

Central Defeats Ordnance Base

A 10-run outburst in the sixth inning highlighted Central Cafe's one-sided 18-to-3 victory over the Army Ordnance Base in a regular amateur league game yesterday at Conley.

Two home runs were turned in by the Cafe nine, Jake Gardner and Dick Dodgens each contributing four-base blows. Jennings got three hits for four attempts. Shoemaker added 3 for 5 and so did Dodgens. Gardner had a perfect day at bat, with five for five. Najour led the Ordnance Base with three for four.

The score: Cent. Cafe 024 11-10 0—18 20 2 Ord. Base 000 10-0 2—3 7 3 Bagley and Vihlen; Miller, Golub, Brown, Jewitt and Distafano.

Shelton Pitches Decatur To Win

Allen Shelton pitched a one-hit ball game yesterday and Decatur defeated Marietta, 7 to 0, in a game at the Decatur park. Shelton was never in trouble and after a four-run outburst in the fourth inning there was little doubt of the outcome.

Quarles, Marietta hurler, was nicked for only five blows by the winners but two errors hurt his chances.

The only hit off Shelton was a single in the sixth by Barbour, who was promptly thrown out stealing. Only 30 men faced the Decatur chunker, two walking and the other living on an error.

ON THE LINE With Considine.

NEW YORK, May 12.—(INS)—On orchid has grown in the ash heap of mimeographer publicity handouts. Here's one that will never join the dozens of others that hit the limbo of the wastebasket.

It was written by Carl Erbe, publicity director of the big Greek War Relief show at Madison Square Garden next week. It concerns sports and the bill which the civilized world owes to Greece.

Mr. Erbe: Very few of us who are seated comfortably in our great athletic stadiums today, witnessing different American sports events, are cognizant of the debt we owe the Greeks.

It was about this time of the year in the fifth century, B. C., that Greece was at war with her neighboring states. Yet King Minos decreed that the regular ball games should continue. The ball of that day was made of a light clay, not balala, and the most popular game was a cross between what we know today as baseball and football.

All the games were played in honor of Zeus, not to be confused with the inventor of the Zeus suit. Stadiums were built to house this growing sports interest, and the architecture followed the classic simplicity of the stadium built to house the first Olympics, staged in 776 B. C. that standard still is followed.

Most of the early Grecian sports survive to this day, some of them changed only slightly by the passage of centuries. They had running at assorted distances, high and broad-jumping, discus throwing and wrestling. And weight lifting, of course, dates from the day when Milo of Croton lifted a new born calf over his head and repeated the performance through the calf's life until he was finally hoisting a 1,000 pound cow.

The garden itself is built upon lines laid down by Greek architects. The variety show, a development of early Greek dramatists, will enlist the support of leading stage, screen and radio stars. The money taken in will help keep alive many Greeks who are direct descendants of those who contributed so much to our present day culture.

Gunder Hagg, or Gunner Haegg—depending on which paper you read—is coming to the United States on a tanker. He'll be 23 days en route, if all goes well.

We trust that the A. A. U., which will arrange a number of races for the swift Swede, will take the advice of Hagg's scheduled rival, Greg Rice, and give the Swede every opportunity to recover from his sea legs. Otherwise, he'll have to run with blinkers, or he'll be all over the track.

When we spoke to Rice about Hagg/Haegg, Greg assumed he would be flown over here. However, the gallant Notre Dame boy insisted even then that he should be given a long period in which to acclimate himself. Now, more than ever, we ought to give the guy a break and send our best against him only when Gunder/Gunner says he's ready.

Lawson Beats Naval Air Base Behind Douthat

Five-hit hurling by Southpaw Dick Douthat gave Lawson General hospital a 6-to-0 victory over Naval Air Station yesterday afternoon in a regular Atlanta Amateur Federation League game.

Douthat, a former pro, was in fine form and got good support from his mates. He struck out nine men.

Lawson was held to seven hits by Thompson, but they made the most of their chances and racked up an important victory.

D. Robinson and Casey led the winners at bat.

The score: Lawson 010 022 010—6 8 0 Nav. Base 000 000 000—0 4 0 Douthat and Casey; Thompson and Leamon.

McNutt Plugs For Off-Hour Baseball Tilts

Man Power Boss Lauds Effort To Accommodate 'Industrial Army.'

By PAT O'BRIEN.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—(AP)—Baseball in general, and off-hour contests in particular, received a strong plug today from Paul V. McNutt, the nation's man power boss.

Approving efforts to accommodate the swing-shift of America's "industrial army," McNutt said he had read of the recent National League morning game between Cincinnati and Pittsburgh.

"I hope that these games at odd hours work out and draw the crowd that baseball deserves," he added, saying that such a program was in line with a policy which the War Man-Power Commission has long stressed.

"It is important that community service, both public and private, reconsider their ordinary peacetime arrangements," McNutt said in a statement to the Associated Press. "They may find that they can make a large contribution toward adding to the efficiency and morale of America's industrial army."

McNutt said the hours of stores, shops and laundries, to mention just a few, were originally fixed to accommodate the needs of persons working a normal day. These establishments, like baseball clubs, now must reconsider their arrangements, he added, to care for industrial workers whose only time-off comes at odd-hours.

McNutt, an ardent sports fan who once pitched for Indiana University, did not mention what he thought of the inroads on baseball due to players leaving to go into the armed forces and war industries.

The morning Pittsburgh-Cincinnati contest drew less than 3,000 fans. Several minor league odd-hour contests have done better. The idea of morning games was something too strange for the major league owners to digest in a hurry. But don't be too surprised, now it has McNutt's indorsement, if other teams tee off at each other while the dew still is on the infield.

Withers Mile May 22 Next For the Fleet

NEW YORK, May 12.—(AP)—Trainer Don Cameron announced today that the next start for Count Fleet, Kentucky Derby and Preakness winner, would be in the sixtieth running of the $15,000 added Withers Mile at Belmont Park May 22. After that he'll be pointed for the Belmont Stakes on June 5.

Cameron galloped Mrs. John D. Hertz's tall colt slowly around Belmont's track today in his first work since taking the Preakness by eight lengths last Saturday. He'll get a half-mile "blow-out" either tomorrow or Friday, and a long workout the following day.

Don Meade Appeals To N. Y. Commission

NEW YORK, May 12.—(P)—Don Meade, recently denied a riding license by the Jockey Club (New York), has appealed to the New York State Racing Commission and his case is expected to be heard Friday.

Meade, one of the country's ranking jockeys, was set down last
